No Stick of Furniture To Dig Out a Billion

How Does Krupp Manage? Why Pet Cats? Try Children

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

A witness testifying for the husband accuses Mrs. Stillman of this treasonable utterance against matrimony: "I will not be a stick of furniture to any man."

What of it? Why should any woman be a stick of furniture to any man? Too many husbands look upon wives as furniture that should be content if kept nicely upholstered. And those are often the husbands that also upholster somebody else in some "love nest," the modern name of an apartment in which a man makes an ass of himself.

Hays, Postmaster-General, will change the postal savings bank system, putting it on a fair basis, paying higher interest on deposits, starting interest at once and letting depositors get their money when they want it.

Hitherto the postal bank has been managed in such a way as to prevent deposits. This was done to please the banks fearing competition.

The banks should welcome a great postal savings system. It will bring out of hoarding a thousand million dollars, as Mr. Hays says, and, what is more important, it will encourage thrift, create greater respect for government and stop the shipping of money out of the country by foreign workers. Those workers will trust the United States; they won't trust anyone else.

When the government gets the money it is deposited in private banks at low interest, and the banks put it in circulation, where it is needed to start business.

This country needs more currency and more circulation of currency. A few billions of the much abused "fiat" money would not hurt us, perhaps. European countries, turning out money as fast as their presses can run, seem to be doing business while we are standing still.

The Krupp Iron Works in Germany, for instance, employs now 30 per cent. more men than before the war, while our lame iron works are running two-thirds idle, or worse.

Now that we have officially stopped war with Germany, we might send a commission to learn how the Krupps do it.

Three thousand million dollars' worth of ships, built with the people's money, are to be sold for whatever they will bring—perhaps half of one of the three billions they cost.

"Building in war time was very expensive," you are told, "and the people must charge up their loss to patriotism." Not quite All. It helped Sheriff Grady, dear friends. Charge about one-quarter to patriotism and three-quarters to profiteering, and you will be nearer the truth.

How calmly and cheerfully the government and everybody concerned admit that efficient management of shipping under government ownership is impossible, and that private owners must do the work. A government that cannot manage ships is either incompetent, dishonest, or both. Which is it? Our army could dig the Panama canal, at a reasonable price, where private enterprise of high ingenuity and energy cannot the navy manage ships for the people?

The real answer is this: Public ownership and management would interfere with private profit and vested interests, and this is a country managed for private profit and vested interests. Whoever thinks otherwise is a poor simpleton, and could not get a job from the vested interests—they want intelligent men.

A woman, riding peacefully in her motor with her pet Angora cat, was suddenly attacked by the cat, which fastened its teeth in her hand and held fast until choked to death by the woman's husband. Of course, deserving much sympathy. But why do human beings insist on adopting as companions partly-domesticated beasts when there are children to be had that never bite. If children are too much trouble and rear-ing is too much work, why not a baby lamb in the Spring, to be eaten in the Fall. That's better than a cat or dog that tries to eat you.

Foolish people in New York planned a big anti-prohibition parade. It won't do them any good. You might as well parade in Hades with signs reading "We want water." You would not get the water.

Prohibition will stay in the Constitution for at least thirty years, probably fifty, perhaps forever. It depends on what the next generation or two look like. If they find that they must import wine-drinking or beer-drinking labor in order to get a day's work done, they may go back to beer and wine, without whiskey. Perhaps that could be done without changing the Constitution, but it would require strong public opinion.

The Reverend F. B. Harris talks on seriously about the parade against prohibition. He calls it "seditious, treasonable, more sinis-

IDENTIFY TRAGEDY VICTIM

Dorothy E. Stewart, Jobless Stenographer, Ended Life by Bullet at Plaza

The pretty young woman who died a short time after she was found with a bullet in her temple in a room in the Hotel Plaza Sunday night was identified today as Miss Dorothy E. Stewart, a stenographer out of work.

She had been rooming at the Y. W. C. A. Home on Warrenton street.

According to the police there remains little doubt that the girl, who was about twenty-eight years old, killed herself.

She is known to have possessed the small revolver which was found by her side.

Nevertheless, police are continuing their search for the man with whom she registered at the hotel and who left her a short time before she shot herself.

While not giving out details concerning the girl's family, Captain Driscoll of the East Dedham street station declared he was convinced her visit to the hotel was her first misstep.

The girl and her male companion registered at the Plaza Saturday night as "Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Boyer of Gloucester."

The man left the room Sunday, about an hour before the body was found. As he left a maid entered the room.

Miss Stewart apologized and said she would be out by 6 o'clock.

When hotel attendants returned at 6 she was dying.

Checks of the Citizens' National Bank found on her person were made out to "Dorothy S. Shaw."

Only two fatal accidents occurred, as compared with eleven over the Bunker Hill Day period.

Goodwin said auto traffic was especially heavy.

BOTH SIDES TO FREE CAPTIVES

Peace Negotiations Progress Favorably as Smuts Confers With Leaders

Dublin, July 5.—Thomas McAnuff, a schoolteacher from Birmingham, Athlone, was shot by masked men at Newry, Ireland, today while the teacher's brother was being arrested. The teacher was visiting her parents at the time.

By International News Service.

Dublin, July 5.—Peace negotiations are proceeding favorably, according to all indications this evening. General Smuts, Premier of South Africa, who slipped into Dublin unobserved this morning, lost no time in getting into action.

He conferred during the afternoon with prominent Republican officials. It is believed that both sides will release their prisoners and that fighting will cease this week.

Owing to the difficulty in communicating with groups of the Irish Republican army in isolated districts, hostilities may be slow in stopping in such places. It is expected that the Earl of Bandon, the aged nobleman who was captured by Republicans a week ago, soon will be liberated.

Republican officials declined to make any predictions regarding the peace outcome, but there is a current of opinion that a settlement probably will be reached along dominion lines. This agreement, if reached and accepted, would give Ireland the same form of government as Canada and South Africa.

Premier Smuts' secret entrance to Dublin was explained this afternoon. He said that, for the purpose of avoiding newspaper reporters and photographers, he had remained in his cabin on the Holyhead-Dublin packet until all the other passengers had debarked, giving the impression he was not on board. In the meantime, Lord Mayor O'Neill and the other officials who were at the pier to extend formal greetings, not seeing General Smuts, concluded that he had postponed his visit and departed.

Later in the day Premier Smuts called on Lord Mayor O'Neill and explained the circumstances.

The peace outlook is brighter today than for some time. It was reported that the leaders of the Irish Republican army had agreed to an armistice, but this has not been confirmed. It had previously been stated that military matters would not be allowed to enter into the peace conversations.

FIREMEN SAVE CHILDREN AT WAKEFIELD

Tots Are Brought Unconscious Through Smoke and Flame to Street

Heroic work on the part of fire fighters saved the lives of two children from flames which swept No. 26 Lake street, Wakefield, today.

The blaze started in the basement of the three-family house, and spread so rapidly that the adults had just time to seize what lay nearest to hand rush to the streets.

When the firemen arrived the building was filled with dense smoke and flames were bursting from the lower windows.

It was not until then that Mrs. May Woods and Mrs. A. C. Jones realized that each had left a small boy in the flames. Both mothers, driven frantic with anxiety, attempted to dash back into the burning building, but were restrained by firemen.

Firemen Cossman and Jacob put on gas masks and entered the lower floor searching for the children. Jacob discovered Richard Jones, three years old, unconscious under a lounge in his mother's bedroom, where he had crawled to escape the smoke and heat.

Jacob was slightly burned in getting him to the street.

Cossman found Bert Wood, seven years old, under a bed in his mother's apartment. The boy was overcome by the smoke and was carried down a ladder.

Both firemen were singed and slightly burned before they got out of the building. The damage done by the fire, the cause of which has not been determined, amounted to slightly more than $1,000.

BATTLES THIEF IN HOME

Mrs. Sheppard, in Nightclothes, Tries in Vain to Hold Burglar—$700 Stolen

Mrs. Henry Sheppard, clad only in nightclothes and half-blinded from a cut over her eye, battled desperately but in vain to hold a burglar she surprised in the bedroom of her home at No. 198 Cross street, Malden.

The man escaped with $700 in cash, two gold watches, two chains, and a Knights of Pythias pin.

Mrs. Sheppard awoke to see the man, already laden with booty, peering into her closet.

She leaped up behind him, and half strangled him with a neck hold. The man shook her loose and threw her to the floor. He tried to dive through an open window, but she seized him by one leg. As she did so her forehead struck the sash, and the heel of the burglar's shoe struck her in the eye.

She continued to try to hold him, hearing her husband running from an adjoining room. When Sheppard arrived the burglar had jumped to the ground and made off.

Sheppard is a garage proprietor and the $700 in cash represented his week-end receipts, which he had not had time to bank.

RED CROSS SOLD CIGARETTES TO PROFITEERS IN FRANCE

Forced Soldiers to Buy Tobacco, Donated by American Public, Out of Meagre Army Stipend

New York, July 5.—While the Red Cross was soliciting money in America for cigarettes, the organization overseas was disposing of tobacco to speculators.

Instead of receiving cigarettes free, as the American public was led to believe was the case, soldiers and sailors had to purchase them.

This new disclosure comes to the New York American's ears exposing the workings of the Red Cross serves to answer some of the many letters received by the newspaper.

The "cigarette situation" is mentioned in the majority of these letters, of which the following, written by a veteran who asks that his name be withheld for the present, is an example:

"It was known a long time ago to veterans that the Red Cross officials were selling supplies to civilians and soldiers.

HAD TO PAY FOR SMOKES.

"I myself spent fourteen months on the other side as an infantryman. Some sweet job for the munificent salary of $30 a month, less allotment of $15 a month, less insurance of $6.10 a month.

"So you see the large amount I had left to spend on a 'wild time' over there. The good people who stayed at home contributed to various organizations, and in contributing to the Red Cross thought the latter organization would give its fellows a little comfort, such as an occasional pack of cigarettes, a cup of coffee and possibly a piece of pie.

"I am now told by people who remained at home that these —— fakers would get up on platforms and beg for money, saying how they were supplying the boys with chocolate, cigarettes and the little dainties.

"From what I saw in fourteen months in France, I'll say if these wonderful people had any things of that sort they ate them themselves or smoked them themselves. Chocolate cost us at least a franc a cake and we paid the same price for cigarettes that the people at home were paying, and those people had more than $2 a month to spend."

An alleged copy of a letter purported to have been sent by the mercantile firm of N. Chatham & Son, Metz, to their broker, James S. Burns, Paris, is translated as follows:

"June 14, 1919.

"Mr. Burns:

"In accord with our conversation of a few days back, I hereby authorize you to purchase 50,000 boxes of cigarettes, from cigarettes to the box, as described by you, the brand of the cigarette to be 'Memphis,' from the cigarettes of Cousin & Son, medium price of seven francs seventy-five centimes per hundred box, f. o. b. Paris.

"It is also understood that you will do all possible to obtain these goods through order de transport and to the territory occupied by me; these orders de transport shall be made out for the American Red Cross. It is further agreed that these goods shall not be sold in France.

"I will remit on receipt of bill of lading by American Red Cross.

"CHATHAM."

HOW SPECULATORS WORKED.

A postscript reads:

"As agreed between you and herself, I will reimburse you for your trouble in getting the order de transport."

The alleged bill of sale, represented to have been exchanged between Burns and Chatham, is included from the French as follows, dated June 21, 1919:

"Seventy-five cases cigarettes, 'Memphis,' containing four hundred boxes to the case, one hundred cigarettes in each box. Total 30,000 boxes of 100 cigarettes, at seven francs, seventy-five centimes, 2,362,500 francs. Merchandise sent by order de transport to Cologne, Germany. Price on order de transport approximately 1,000 francs."

In purchasing tobacco and cigarettes speculators paid over stipulated sums to the Red Cross on receipt of orders de transport (bills of lading), no freight being paid on such goods.

ONE CIGARETTE EACH

At railroad canteens maintained by the Red Cross cigarettes were given away under this condition:

When the boys of the service had purchased a fifteen-cent meal, each man was permitted to take one cigarette from a basket.

Aside from these instances, when two men were traveling to or from the trenches on the front; when the men were fighting at the front, or in the hospitals, free cigarettes were rare things. The unblemished men, according to their own stories and to documents in possession of the New York American, were forced to pay for their cigarettes.

At the same time, as shown by documents of the Red Cross, the latter organization was SELLING TOBACCO AND CIGARETTES TO SPECULATORS.

'ANGEL FACE' BOY TAKES TUMBLE FROM GRACE

Waltham Police Find Ansel Rich Had Beguiled Boston's Mayor

Ansel H. Rich, Waltham's "angel faced boy," is not such an angel after all.

The fourteen-year-old boy whose story softened the hearts of the Waltham police and who was given a Fourth of July celebration at the home of Probation Officer Charles Chase, while the police turned the city upside down looking for a job for him, turned out to be a cold hard boy.

He had even beguiled Mayor Peters. His undoing resulted, it seems, from a picture of the "angel face" which was printed in the Boston American.

George Canty, the Mayor's secretary, recognized the picture as that of the Mayor's protege of a week ago.

It seems the boy came to Boston and arrived in due time at City Hall. Mayor Peters heard his story and took an interest. Ansel was fitted out with a new suit, and a job was found for him at the home of Joseph A. Calahan, a clerk in the City Register's office.

A few days later the boy was missing and so was Mrs. Calahan's purse and several dollars.

Today, when the story reached Waltham, Ansel was removed from Mr. Chase's home and turned over to the Roxbury Court. He will be faced with a larceny charge.

ISSUE WARRANT IN DEATH OF VETERAN

George E. Wilson Formally Charged With Manslaughter in Municipal Court

The killing of Joseph D. Coppinger, a Yankee Division veteran, in the doorway of the Y. B. Club, resulted when George E. Wilson, former Massachusetts organizer of the American Legion, attempted to settle an argument which had arisen between Coppinger and another man, the police say.

Wilson, it is alleged, struck Coppinger after he had tried in vain to separate the two men and after Coppinger had hurled an abusive epithet at Wilson.

Chief Justice Bolster in the Municipal Court today issued a warrant charging Wilson with manslaughter. The case was to come up for preliminary hearing in the court later in the day, before being submitted to the Grand Jury for action.

Attorney John W. McCormack is appearing as attorney for Wilson, while the government's case is being handled by Sergeant Waught.

Coppinger died at the City Hospital from a fractured skull, according to is believed, when his head struck the floor.

According to witnesses, Coppinger and another member of the club, whom the police have not identified, were engaged in an altercation and were about to come to blows when Wilson stepped between them and tried to pacify them.

Coppinger turned his wrath on the conciliator, it is said and then became abusive.

Wilson, it is alleged, struck him with his right hand on the jaw, knocking him down.

Wilson is one of the most widely known veterans of the New England Division. He has been actively interested in all affairs having to do with the welfare of the returned soldiers.

He was one of the earliest organizers of the American Legion, was president of the Ex-Service Men's Non-Partisan League and recently has been engaged in organizing the Association of Disabled Veterans.

Coppinger was a sergeant in Company E, 101st Infantry, and, according to comrades, had been reduced in rank several times because of infractions of army regulations, but had always managed to be restored by his efficiency.

VANZETTI GIVES ALIBI FOR DAY OF SLAYING

Defendant, on Stand in Trial With Sacco, Tells of Actions in Plymouth

In an effort to escape the electric chair Bartolomeo Vanzetti of Plymouth took the witness stand today in his own defense in Dedham Court.

He and Nicola Sacco of Stoughton are charged with murder in the ex-grocery of the South Braintree hold-up fifteen months ago which resulted in the deaths of Paymaster Parmenter and Guard Berardelli.

This is the sixth week in the trial, one of the longest in the history of the state.

Vanzetti testified that on April 15, 1920, the day of the payroll murders at South Braintree, he sold fish in Plymouth until noon, bought cloth from Joseph Rosen between 12:30 and 1 p. m., then went to the seashore, where he talked with Melvin Corl, a boat builder, for about an hour.

This testimony had previously been corroborated by other witnesses for the defense.

Vanzetti said that at 3 p. m., April 15, 1920, when the payroll murders occurred in South Braintree, he was at the home of Mrs. Frank Fortini, No. 33 Cherry street, South Plymouth, where his lodgings were.

He declared he ate supper at about 6 o'clock that night, then went out and sold clams the next day, spent the night of April 16, 1920, at home, went to Boston looking for work and visiting friends on the 17th, returning home on the evening of the 18th.

Vanzetti explained to the jury his reason for carrying the revolver found upon him when arrested.

"I got the revolver because it was a very bad time and I got it for self defense as I carried much money."

"What do you mean by bad times?" asked Attorney McArnarney.

"There were many hold ups," replied the defendant. He said he had carried the revolver two or three months, obtaining it from Louis Falsini.

He explained that his reason for being in West Bridgewater on the night of the arrest was because he and Sacco agreed to meet Mike Boda and Riccardo Orciani to get Boda's automobile. He said that it was intended that Boda's car should be used to remove "radical" literature from several homes and put it where it would not be seized by the police.

He went to Sacco's home in Stoughton May 5, he said, because Sacco wrote saying he was going to Italy. He remained at Sacco's home on May 4 and 5. (He and Sacco were arrested May 5.) He declared Mrs. Sacco gave him three shells which she found on a shelf. These were found in his pocket when arrested. He was going to give them to a friend in Plymouth, who was a hunter.

With Attorney General J. M. McArnarney recovered from his nervous collapse, the trial was resumed this morning.

McArnarney questioned the first witness, Mrs. Elvira Florence, of No. 121 Water street, Quincy, who testified she had two talks with Mrs. Alessandro Berardelli relative to the revolver her husband owned.

"She told me," said Mrs. Florence, "that he had a revolver, but never carried it, as it was broken, and that she was going to take it to Boston to have it fixed. Three or four days after her husband's funeral, she said, 'Oh, dear, maybe if he had taken my advice and taken the revolver out of the repair shop he would not be as he is today.'"

It is not quite all that. A parade against prohibition, while foolish, is just as lawful as the former parade against whiskey, while government was whiskey's partner, sharing the profits. Men have a right to parade, speak and write against anything—if they obey the law, while it is law. The Constitution of the United States will explain that to the Reverend Mr. Harris.

THIRD WIFE TO SUE CLUBMAN PRESTON GIBSON FOR DIVORCE

WILL BRING ACTION IN EUROPE

Rumors That Heir to Rogers Millions Seeks Separation Abroad Confirmed

Washington, July 5.—Paris dispatches stating that the third millionaire wife of Preston Gibson, wealthy Washington clubman and playwright, is about to bring suit for divorce, confirmed a rumor that has been going the rounds of Washington society for several months.

When the present Mrs. Gibson, who is an heir to part of the H. H. Rogers millions, sailed for Europe last May to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Benjamin, it was rumored that the trip was preliminary to divorce proceedings.

The fact that her husband was not at the pier to bid her adieu, and that her parents had threatened to disinherit her at the time of her marriage to Gibson, lent color to the rumors that now are credited.

Following her marriage four years ago Mrs. Gibson brought suit in chancery to have her father to turn over to her certain moneys held in trust for her from the Rogers estate. It is understood that with the reconciliation to her parents the suit will be dropped.

Mr. Gibson has won considerable recognition as an amateur playwright, newspaperman and war hero, but is best known for his matrimonial adventures. His first wife was Miss Mina Field, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page and niece of Marshall Field of Chicago. The wedding was one of the social events of the 1909 season. Not longer after, however, Mrs. Gibson brought suit for and was granted a divorce.

Gibson's second matrimonial venture in 1918 was even more of a society event, the bride being Grace McMillan Jarvis, granddaughter of the late Senator McMillan of Michigan. Besides being immensely wealthy in her own right, she was an heir to the vast McMillan fortune. Differences between Gibson and the bride's family caused a rift in their happiness, and the playwright found himself again divorced. His third marriage followed in 1917.

Hollander "Lured" Into Movies by Bride

Mrs. S. Russell Hollander, formerly Mildred Reardon, star of the silver screen and former "Follies" show girl, who has induced her husband, a grandson of L. P. Hollander, to forsake commercial life for junior roles in filmland. Young Hollander thinks it the greatest game in the world. He is a member of a well known Boston family and a graduate of Technology.

How S. Russell Hollander, Jr., grandson of L. P. Hollander of Boston, was "lured" into the "movies" by his bride, Miss Mildred Reardon, a star of the silver screen, has been revealed in a letter to a friend in this city.

The marriage, which took place in May, 1920, at Greenwich, Ct., was the culmination of a romance that began at a New York dance, and was unknown except to a few friends of his family.

After the ceremony the couple went to New York for a time, where young Hollander was employed with his father, Sumner Hollander, in Wanamaker's. Later he went to Hollywood, California, where he, too, forsook commercial life for "reel" life. But let him tell it:

"After my marriage," the young man wrote, "I came out here for a vacation, but inasmuch as my wife was in the pictures I finally joined in myself. I am now playing juvenile roles, and think it is the greatest game in the world."

Young Hollander is twenty-two years old, a graduate of Technology and a member of a well-known Boston family.

WIFE WHO SLEW HUSBAND SHOWS NO REMORSE

Haverhill Neighbors Bring Delicacies to Accused; Self-Defence Her Plea

Haverhill, July 5.—Mrs. Katrina Farina, who was arrested here following her admission that she killed her husband, Francisco Farina, with an axe, will be arraigned in the Haverhill Police Court today charged with first degree murder.

Her story of brutality at the hands of her husband was verified by the police. All of her neighbors declare that the husband had made life unbearable for his wife and children.

Several of the neighbors called at the police station yesterday and sent several boxes with Mrs. Farina trying to cheer her up. They brought with them gifts in the shape of food and delicacies.

MALADY OF SKIN TAKES TOLL IN BOSTON

Hub Physicians Seek Remedy for Rare Disease Known as Pemphygus

Pemphigus, a rare skin disease, which in nearly all cases is fatal, is taking its toll in Boston.

There are at present about eight or nine cases of the disease in the city. Two of these, now under treatment at City Hospital, are being watched with great interest by doctors.

WOMAN VICTIM DIES.

A south Boston woman who was afflicted with this ailment died at the City Hospital this week. One of the two patients there now is battling valiantly, while little or no hope is held out for the recovery of the other.

The origin or cause of the disease is not definite although Dr. Town, head Thursday, skin expert at City Hospital, states that the appearance is generally attributed to nervous disturbances.

The onset of Pemphigus breaks out on the body at first in the form of blebs or blisters which contain a serous fluid, or fluid.

BLISTERS CAUSE DEATH.

"These gradually spread over the surface of the body and face or ruin into rapid ulcers, and the entire surface is raw. It is an absorption from these blisters that kills.

"The disease generally causes death although not always fatal. It is neither contagious nor contagious and therefore no epidemic is feared. In fatal cases the patient lingers from one to four years and may be sick as long as this even in case of recovery.

"The cases now under treatment at City Hospital are being watched carefully. Experts are studying the causes and actions of the disease in order to effect a remedy if possible."

Augusta, Me., July 5.—Commissioner of Agriculture Frank P. Washburn declares that the farmers of Maine this year have a wonderful opportunity for Maine apples into new markets and this is the time to make up our minds to get those markets and to hold them.

HAPGOOD OFFERS WORD AGAINST SALES TAX

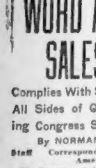
Complies With Suggestion That All Sides of Question Worrying Congress Should Be Given

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.

Staff Correspondent of Boston American

Washington, July 5.—The administration is more worried about taxation than it is about anything else. This fact was commented on to me by the managing editor of the New York American, who sat behind me at the fight on Saturday.

"Why don't you give us more on the subject of taxation?" said he, with his trained journalistic sense.



NORMAN HAPGOOD

As nobody was fighting just then except some of the prelims, whose relative grogginess was no concern of mine, I plunged into the philosophy of the subject.

"I will tell why," I replied. "I have already written on the sales tax, which is the present centre of controversy. Your editorial writers are all sure the sales tax is the right thing. I am not. Having indicated as much, I have not seen the use of crowding wires too much."

ALL SIDES WANTED.

"Oh well," said he, "that has nothing to do with it. That is another department. We want to print all sides of the situation.

"That is intelligent, liberal journalism," said I. "I will take another shot at the tax situation, and perhaps the editorial writers can then use my head for a punching bag."

Some things are settled. The excess profit tax is going to be dropped. So are the highest reaches of the income tax. Business men as a whole are highly pleased with those two decisions, and they argue that capital will begin to flow more freely as soon as those two changes are made.

So we need not worry our elves discussing those items. They are not bringing in much now, anyway, and dropping them will not be felt in the receipts, though it will be used next Summer in the campaign.

AS TO SALES TAX.

The sales tax question has to be decided before Congress can go on to its estimates from other sources. Will it accept the principle of that tax or will it not? That question, in its turn, depends on another.

Those who defend the sales tax say that any tax is passed along to the consumer. That has been a controversial question ever since Jacob's time, I imagine. Once I gave up nearly a year studying taxation, in preparation for some lectures I gave at Yale and for a subsequent book.

I came out of that study with my mind open at the top, if not at the bottom. Professor E. R. A. Seligman, as well known an authority as there is in America, went down to Washington and testified that it is not true that taxes are all passed along to the consumer.

SMOOT WAS ANSWERED.

Senator Smoot, who is the protector of the sales tax, went after the economist hard, but Professor Seligman countered on the Senator's jaw with what looked to me like damaging effect. If I were a legislator I should not be willing to give up trying to make taxes hit the rich unless I was in the neighborhood of $7 per cent. sure I could not do it.

That is one great point. The other is not so much talked about, but I have been hearing great economists discuss it lately. The sales tax is praised because it can be collected without making anybody wince.

WANT A PROTEST.

The economists to whom I refer say that the people there are not against it. They do not want a tax that goes down easily. They want people to holler over taxation. Government, they think, is extravagant enough already. If it discovers a tax that won't be howled over it will be still more extravagant.

One of the most dangerous aspects of the sales tax, according to these philosophers, is that when it gets going at 1 per cent. and the people get used to it, Congress can simply double the amount whenever it wants more money and get it with no yelping.

I have my own ideas about how to raise money, but having let loose this trouble-making article I am going to sit still a few days and see what happens to me. Then I may take the subject up again.

Singer Kept Her Wedding Secret Two Years

Sybil Vane, Welsh prima donna, whose marriage to her accompanist, Leon Bomke, has been kept dark two years for professional reasons. Both artists are well known to Boston music lovers, having appeared here many times.

The secret is out at last. Sybil Vane, Welsh prima donna, and her accompanist, Leon Bomke, who are on their way to England, have been married far two years and kept the ceremony "dark" for fear of its effect upon the bride's professional career.

Miss Vane, or Madame Bomke, is well known to music lovers of Boston, as she has sung here at various times. She expects to fill a number of professional engagements abroad before returning to America.

While overseas she will investigate the possibilities of a bloodless operation on the larynx, which she believes would greatly increase her range.

Bomke is also well known in musical circles here as a pianist of rare ability.

GENERAL ALARM FIRE SCARES LAWRENCE

40 Flee to Street When Blaze Menaces Plain District

Lawrence, July 5.—Forty persons were driven into the street in their night clothing early today when a general alarm fire threatened to sweep through the Plain district, the most thickly-settled part of the city.

The fire broke out in a two-family wooden house, owned by Anthony Benko at No. 235 Chestnut street. Benko and his family, asleep on the upper floor, had difficulty in reaching safety as the flames spread through the apartment.

Four alarms followed in quick succession as the tenement blazed, throwing sparks on scores of two and three-family tenements adjacent. For a time it appeared as if the whole district was doomed.

Police and firemen, who arrived early on the scene, ran through the threatened houses on Chestnut and White streets and awakened the occupants. None was given time to dress. Several women and children, becoming panic stricken, were carried to the street.

The fire was confined to the building in which it started, due solely to the amount of apparatus which responded to the alarms. With but a few exceptions every piece in the city was called. The Plain district is looked upon as the biggest fire menace to the city.

WIFE FAINTS AT HUSBAND'S ARREST

Henry Rosen, a real estate dealer, living on Wilwonsin avenue, East Somerville, was arrested by Patrolmen Moore and McAvoy of the Somerville police on a charge of disturbing the peace. Wile nile police arrived at the house in response to several telephone calls received at the police station, the officers say, they found two men holding Rosen down on the floor and a crowd outside the house. During the excitement, Mrs. Minnie Rosen, wife of the man, fainted and after treatment by a physician was taken to the Somerville Hospital in the police ambulance.

CHINAMAN FIRES SHOT AT MAN IN QUARREL

Chases Fugitive Down Lyman Street Brandishing Revolver in Air

Jim Lee, Chinese laundryman, started a stampede in the West End today, when he fired one shot at Charles F. Feigan and then pursued him down Lyman street, brandishing a revolver.

Patrolman John M. Sullivan arrested Lee, charging him with assault with intent to kill. Feigan was held as a witness.

Lee, whose place of business is at No. 17 Lyman street, said that Feigan was annoying him and was one of a gang that had been bothering him for weeks.

Feigan lives at No. 127 Glenway street, Dorchester. He was not interested in prosecuting the Chinaman, but was disconsolate over the loss of his hat and coat in the heat of the chase.

Girls and men hurrying to work were frightened by the shot and scurried in all directions to safety.

ST. HUGH'S PARISH FIELD DAY JULY 23

The annual field day and lawn party of St. Hugh's parish will be held on the Kendrieken estate, on the corner of Maple and Schuyler streets, Roxbury, on Saturday, July 23. The arrangements are in charge of a committee with Joseph P. Manning as chairman and Rev. David H. Waters as director. Sports and games of all kinds have been arranged and indications point to it being the largest field day gathering in the history of the parish.

21 FIELD CLERKS GET DISCHARGES

Twenty-one army field clerks have been honorably discharged from service, leaving twenty-nine to do the work in the First Corps Area.

According to Colonel Archibald Campbell, adjutant of this area, these clerks were efficient in every way. They were let go because of curtailing of running expenses.

Germany Apathetic Over U. S. Peace

By International News Service.

Berlin, July 5.—Germany is apathetic today over peace with America. News that President Harding had signed the congressional resolution finally ending the technical state of war between the two countries aroused no enthusiasm. There were no joy bells, no flags, no whistles, no cheering in the streets.

There wasn't even a flag flying over the American "Embassy." Ellis Loring Dresel, the United States commissioner, ordered flags held in readiness so they could be run up when official word was received from Washington that President Harding had signed the peace resolution, but up to sundown the official dispatch had not been received.

In the Reichstag satisfaction was expressed over the "technical state of peace," but it was declared that no change in conditions might be expected.

WALSH PLEADS TO REVIVIFY PARTY

Bay State Senator Calls on Democrats to Discard Impracticable Policies

New York, July 5.—An appeal to Democrats to revivify their party in line with its best traditions was made here by United States Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts in an address at Tammany Hall.

Senator Walsh said in part:

"I feel as a loyal Democrat that the time is ripe constructive suggestions be out in the middle of a campaign, but at a time when a campaign is not on. There is no mistake that our party has fallen to a very low ebb of public opinion, and I have given considerable study in an effort to find out what the trouble is and what policies have not the approval of the people and should be avoided.

"For the time, we need oblivion and urgent today it is the need of returning to, or perhaps reviving, the Democratic principle and the Democratic institutions invented by those who fostered and originally made secure the independence of this republic.

"The country calls to the Democratic party to purge itself of impracticable policies and unwholesome influences, and revive its ancient quarrel in defence of the people and in behalf of individual liberty and freedom."

NINE DEAD IN GASOLINE BLAST

42 Known Injured in Explosion at Standard Oil Plant in Whiting, Ind.

Whiting, Ind., July 5.—Casualties in the explosion that partly destroyed the Standard Oil Company's refinery here were expected to increase during the day, either from deaths of injured or by the finding of additional bodies. Nine are known to have died and forty-two are injured, ten so seriously that their recovery is doubtful.

Two of the huge steel stills used for the production of gasoline exploded and other stills in the plant caught fire. Burning oil and gas covered an area of several hundred square yards. Property damage resulting from the blast is estimated at $2,000,000.

MT. EVEREST CLIMBERS NEAR GOAL AFTER HARDSHIPS

This, the fourth of the series of exclusive dispatches from the Mt. Everest Expedition, reveals the greatest progress yet reported.

The date line of the dispatch indicates that twenty days ago the explorers had arrived at Tingri Dzong, which was selected as the permanent base for the immediate advance on Everest, only forty miles distant, the highest mountain in the world and the last unexplored portion of the earth.

In reaching Tingri Dzong the party has covered 120 miles in fifteen days or less, through a country where it is doubtful if any non-Asiatic has ever previously passed. The last reports left the expedition at Kampa Dzong, where on June 8, according to the dispatch, published in the Boston American, Dr. A. M. Kellas, the chemist of the expedition, died suddenly. Details of Dr. Kellas' death are contained in the dispatch published today.

At Kampa Dzong the explorers after having advanced northward from Darjeeling over the arduous, but well-known trade route, from Darjeeling, India, into Tibet, turned decidedly westward along the Tibetan frontier into a region which, while it had been surveyed by native engineers of the Indian government, was comparatively a terra incognita.

Nevertheless, the march through this region from Kampa Dzong to Tingri Dzong has actually been made in less time than the march from Darjeeling to Kampa Dzong, a fact which speaks volumes for the excellence of the reorganization of the transport after the breakdown of the Indian mules in Sikkim. Altogether from Darjeeling to Tingri Dzong, the expedition has traveled 240 miles since May 18.

From Tingri Dzong the advance will be southeastward, Mount Everest lying on the border of Tibet and Nepal.

The first news of the explorers' adventures and discoveries are sent by courier, native runners, back over the route traversed by the expedition to Darjeeling, and then dispatched by telegraph and cable.

(By Colonel Howard Bury, leader of Mount Everest Expedition. Special cable dispatch. Copyrighted and supplied by Mount Everest Committee.)

Tingri Dzong, Tibet, June 10.—(Via Simla, June 30).—Following is the record of our journey from Phari to Khamba Dzong:

We now began to enter the real Tibetan country. Our transport consisted of a most miscellaneous collection of animals, comprising donkeys, yaks, ponies and mules, with the result that there always was considerable delay in starting in the morning.

Dr. Kellas unfortunately was rather seedy with a bad attack of diarrhea and had to be carried in an armchair by coolies.

We crossed Tangla, 15,200 feet, a most gentle and easy pass; then we rode ten miles across the absolutely level plain of Tongpuenasum.

Monsoon clouds arose south of us in great rolling billows, but scarcely a raindrop ever came. Chomolhari was a magnificent sight the whole time; it's 7,000 feet of sheer precipices were most impressive.

WINDS ARE VIOLENT.

Our first halt was at Tuna in quite a comfortable bungalow, being on the main trade route. We were very glad of its shelter, as the wind was blowing furiously outside. In Tibet the mornings are usually calm and most beautiful, but at midday strong wind arises and blows with great violence every afternoon, dying down in the evening.

The next march was to Dochen, another stage on the Gyangtse road. On the way we passed a number of goa-goa, Tibetan gazelle, grazing in the plains. The road was perfectly level, keeping the heights of 14,700 feet all the time.

Near Dochen we followed the shores of the Bamtso, a large shallow lake, several miles across. In the background are great glacier-covered mountains, and on still mornings these are reflected in the lake waters. Many geese were swimming about and also brahminy ducks and terns.

After Dochen we left the Gyangtse road and crossed over the Dug pass, 16,400 feet high to Khe, which lay in the broad valley there. In this valley are the ruins of what must have been at one time an important city, as they extended more than a mile in every direction and some buildings were of considerable size.

TROUT FILL SPRINGS.

There was a curious crenellated wall, which the people told me was where the inhabitants exposed barley flour for the crows to eat to show how well off they were. Now there is no water in the valley for more than a couple of small barley fields. Our next march was to Khera, where we camped with some nomads who were very hospitable and put several of their tents at our disposal. Khera is 15,700 feet high and though in July we were very warm we had a sharp frost at night. From Khera we marched to Tatsang, about six miles across, across two passages at 16,100 feet. The gradients were easy all the way. I shot a gazelle for the pot.

Then followed ten miles across a flat, sandy plain to Tatsang (Falcons' Nest), where we camped beside excellent springs below a small nunnery. The springs are full of snow trout. Mr. Bullock collected a number of these trout in his butterfly net and they proved a great addition to our menu for dinner.

We were now 16,000 feet high and the winds here blew most keenly during the night.

VISITS NUNNERY.

Before leaving Tatsang I visited a nunnery which contained about thirty nuns, all with shorn heads and a curious woolly headdress representing hair. They showed me all over their abode and their place of worship.

The latter is dark and filled with prayer wheels of all sizes and descriptions which the nuns spent the day in turning. There is a big prayer wheel containing about a half million prayers.

After leaving the nunnery we jogged along a dry, barren valley, gradually rising in about twelve miles to a pass 17,200 feet high.

The valley then suddenly narrowed into a fine limestone gorge and suddenly the fort of Kampa appeared towering above us on the cliffs, really a quite impressive sight.

As soon as I arrived the Jongpen came down to pay his respects with a present of five sheep and 100 eggs.

While talking to him a messenger ran up to say that Dr. Kellas had suddenly died crossing the pass of a sudden heart attack.

We buried him on the morning of June 8, on one of the slopes below the fort, within sight of the Everest he was so eager to climb and looking over the three great peaks of Pawhunri, Kinchenjow and Chomlomo, which he alone had already climbed, a fitting resting place for the great mountaineer, amid the mountains he so dearly loved.

LIGHT DRINKING LOSES LICENSES FOR FOUR

Goodwin's New Drastic Order to Punish Those Suspected of Indulging

An entirely new and drastic policy was today established in the crusade to stem the auto-death wave when State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin suspended the licenses of four autoists whom he had reason to believe were out on the highway after drinking liquor.

"Not a proper person to operate having operated after drinking intoxicating liquor," was the official reason stated by Registrar Goodwin for snapping up their licenses.

Mr. Goodwin does not accuse them of being drunk, nor of being addicted to the use of liquor. He does say that he has good reason to believe that they partook of liquor before driving and that, therefore, they were unfitted to operate.

"It may seem to be drastic punishment," he said, "but when I look at the ever-increasing list of deaths, I am moved to take drastic action."

Mr. Goodwin's action was based on reports submitted to him by the police and by his own inspectors. It marks a new and permanent policy, he said.

THIS WEEK'S BEAUTY HELP

It is not necessary to shampoo your hair so frequently if it is entirely and properly cleansed each time by the use of a really good shampoo. The easiest to use and quickest drying shampoo I can recommend to our readers is one that brings out all the natural beauty of the hair and that can be enjoyed at very little expense, by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox which can be obtained from any druggist's, in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just to the top of the head. This should be rubbed into the scalp, every strand of hair, thoroughly dissolves all impurities. It is very soothing and cooling in its action, as well as beneficial to both scalp and hair. After rinsing out the lather as directed, your hair and the scalp is fresh, clean and free from dandruff, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a bright luster and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy.—Advertisement.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

Announces a Series of Important Articles by

JAMES B. CONNOLLY

Famous Boston Author, on

"IRELAND TODAY AND TOMORROW"

The distinguished author of "Out of Gloucester," "Open Water" and other popular stories returned to his home in Dorchester only a few days ago after several weeks in Ireland.

Connolly visited Dublin, Belfast and other centres, interviewed the high and the lowly, talked with all manner of Irishmen. He knows his subject, knows it at first hand, knows what you want to know.

These are important articles because they give us, for the first time, the views of a popular and respected AMERICAN on Irish conditions of the moment.

James B. Connolly is a man of courage. No man, no politician, in or out of office, can pull the wool over his eyes. Winner of an Olympic championship, veteran of the Spanish-American War, the popular author is exactly the man to tell other Americans the truth about Ireland; even if that means the truth about England, too!

The FIRST of Mr. Connolly's Reports, on

"IRELAND TODAY AND TOMORROW"

Will Be Printed in

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

MONDAY, JULY 11

Other Connolly Articles Will Appear on Successive Days.

There will be a big demand for these Connolly papers. Everybody interested in the most VITAL of international problems, the fight of a small but brave nation for nationhood, will say a timely word NOW to Mr. Newsdealer.

Know the TRUTH about Ireland, fresh from the honest heart and the truth-telling pen of an AMERICAN. Read James B. Connolly in the BOSTON AMERICAN.

SONG REPRINTS WILL START NEXT WEEK

Only Chance for Newcomers to Enter American's $6,000 Title Test

The printing of all Back Pictures in the Boston American's $6,000 Songs of the World Title Test will begin on Wednesday of next week, one week from tomorrow.

On that day we reach the half-way point in our journey. Picture No. 34 will be due. Owing to the fact that in this Test there will be but ONE printing of Back Pictures, it has been decided to have it at the half-way point.

Many participants in the Test, who have followed it from the first day, have lost, torn, mislaid or "missed" one or more Pictures. This will be their opportunity as well as that of the newcomer.

Get as many full-size pictures as you can. Start today. Be sure to have the Boston American one week from tomorrow. With it you will receive one full-size picture and, in smaller size, many, if not all the pictures which will have preceded it.

If for any reason room cannot be provided for so many pictures on one day, fifteen pictures will be printed on Wednesday of next week and sixteen on the following day.

Remember that this will be the ONLY printing of Back Pictures. You cannot get back numbers of the papers from this office, because we do not have them. Only the newsdealer can supply Boston Americans. Give him your order! Be a regular!

The Test will consist of 60 pictures. Each will be printed without a title. The title will appear among many others—in a List of Titles printed with the picture.

LIST OF AWARDS.

When titles are sent in, at the close of the Test, they will be compared with the Official List of Titles and the following awards will be paid in cash to those who have sent in the largest number of CORRECT titles:

ONE FIRST AWARD	$1,000
ONE SECOND AWARD	750
ONE THIRD AWARD	750
ONE FOURTH AWARD	500
ONE FIFTH AWARD	400
ONE SIXTH AWARD	300
ONE SEVENTH AWARD	200
ONE EIGHTH AWARD	150
ONE NINTH AWARD	100
ONE TENTH AWARD	50
100 AWARDS OF $10 EACH	1,000
110 AWARDS OF $5 EACH	550
Totals	$6,000

Every title used in this Test is the title of a song. They are the titles of various nations, "Songs of the World."

Each of the sixty pictures bears the name of a song.

The title of the picture was chosen first; the picture was drawn to illustrate a designated title.

Every day a Test Picture and a List of Titles is printed. The Correct Title will be found in the List of Titles printed on the same day as the picture.

There is nothing mysterious about the Test, and yet you must understand from the beginning that it IS a Test. Finding some titles will be as easy as rolling off a log. Locating others will call upon your detective ability. If you are game, come in. The $6,000 will be paid, in 220 awards, even if the highest number of correct titles received should be but thirty.

Please read the Rules of the Test. Read them carefully. Understand what you are doing and what you undertake to do. Send in nothing before the close of the Test. Place a standing order for the Boston American with your newsdealer. Tell him you MUST have the paper every day, at least until the Song Title Test is ended. Test Pictures are not printed on Sunday. They appear in the Boston American only.

Rules of Song Title Test

The Boston American Songs of the World Title Test is a test of skill and interest open to all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any part of town in New England or Canada.

Two hundred and twenty cash awards will be given by this newspaper to its readers who send in the largest percentage of correct titles to the sixty pictures to be published one each day consecutively (Sunday excepted) in the Boston American.

All members of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The test will consist of 60 pictures, each representing the title of a well-known song to be printed one each day in the Boston American, the first picture on Wednesday, June 8, 1921.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running or which may hereafter be started by this paper will not debar anyone from entering this test, nor will

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each set must contain only ONE TITLE to each picture, and no participant shall be entitled to more than one award, nor shall more than one award shall be given in any one family.

Each and every title must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American; or on a piece of same book form by itself, accompanied either by the pictures furnished by the Boston American, or by a neat reproduction thereof, and must bear the name, residence, etc., of the participant on each title blank.

Do not send your titles in "list" form, i. e., do not write titles under one another on a piece of paper.

In case there are not complete sets of correct titles, the awards will be given to the persons submitting the greatest number of solutions, the basis of neatness, judgment and accuracy.

In case of a tie awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied participants will receive similar awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their titles before the end of the Test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. KEEP your titles from day to day and at the end of the Test arrange them in numerical order and send them in at one time. Only one set of titles will be allowed in making the awards. The first titles sent in after the time for the close will stand no better than the last submitted.

All titles must be delivered to the Boston American title headquarters, at No. 30 Summer street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or messenger, within the specified time limit which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing titles must be legibly addressed as follows: "Song Title Editor, No. 30 Summer street, Boston, Mass., P. O. Box 230," and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written or stamped on the upper left-hand corner.

All titles to the Test will contain no written or printed matter, if mailed. It is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at postal letter rates, as mail of this character does not be possible as the final matter. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse to receive any mail matter on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

There will be no title or answer book to buy. Lists of Song Titles will be printed in the Boston American. The list appearing will contain among others the correct titles.

Any person desiring further information should address their inquiries to the Song Title Editor, No. 30 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass. Questions will be answered as far as possible through the columns of the Boston American. If participants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for that purpose, or they may decide Mails also or call in person.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to those conditions that it may deem necessary for fair-

FIGHTS TO BAR 6 WOMEN ON KABER JURY

Defence Exercises Peremptory Challenges to Have Men Only Decide Client's Fate

By International News Service.

Cleveland, O., July 5.—Six women and six men were tentatively seated in the jury box at the trial of Mrs. Catherine Wise Kaber, alleged husband slayer, within an hour after court opened today.

William Corrigan, chief counsel for the defence, immediately announced that he would eliminate every woman from the jury and exercised the first of the sixteen peremptory challenges, allowed the defence, to obtain the dismissal of Mrs. Rose Oliver.

"Society is crucifying me. Women's lies have got me into this," wails the accused woman, described by Edward C. Stanton, county prosecutor, as an "arch murderess comparable to Lady Macbeth and Lucretia Borgia," and, according to the indictment of the State, conspirator in a murder plot that savers of medieval crime, with its "black magic" and hired assassins.

Who is the college professor who turned "caveman" to woo the "murder queen" and give her temporary solace in her unhappy married life with Daniel Kaber, wealthy paint manufacturer, and made her forget the love she bore her first husband, Thomas McArdle, wealthy Chicago business man?

He is the "man of mystery."

The State seeks his identity to learn whether Mrs. Kaber confided plans for getting rid of her invalid husband to him.

He is, or was, a member of the faculty of Smith College, famous educational institution for women, according to Mrs. Mary Wade, a fortune teller, who will swear on the witness stand that Mrs. Kaber asked her to use "psychic vibrations" to kill Kaber, confessed to her that she never lost her love for McArdle and to her ears confided the affair with the college professor.

"It's a lie," the accused woman half shrieked today when questioned about the professor.

She quit pacing her cell long enough to exclaim with bitterness:

"If I were young and beautiful like Clara Smith Hamon and other women who have killed men, I would have public sympathy.

"Two of the three women whose freedom depend on the outcome of the trial invoke curses on Mrs. Kaber—one is Mrs. Mary Brickel, the sixty-nine-year-old grandmother of the three generations indicted for first degree murder.

"She is hard—she should pay," the old woman says over and over again of her daughter.

The other is Mrs. Erminia Colavito, the "Poison Queen" who sold Mrs. Kaber the "magic medicine" which the State claims slowly sapped the strength of Kaber and rendered him helpless.

Of the four women indicted only Marian McArdle, the "stone woman's" nineteen-year-old daughter, remains cheerful, as the shadow of the death chair hangs over her. She remains steadfast in her loyalty to her mother.

BOYS ADMIT DEATH THREAT WAS "JOKE"

Bristol, R. I., July 5.—The police have been unable to find the mysterious assailant of Mrs. Josephine Romano, who was shot in the breast while sitting on Bristol Common listening to a band concert. HALF OF GARRISON SEEKS DISCHARGE

New London, Conn., July 5.—Two hundred regular army soldiers, half of the garrison of Fort Wright, Fisher's Island, have applied for discharge since General Harris announced that the army will be reduced to 150,000.

—Fresh From Paris—

PARIS, France.

UNUSUAL waistline treatments are a feature of the Summer mode, and two distinctive examples are sketched above. Midnight blue taffeta makes the exceedingly wearable little dress at the left. The surplice bodice and the wide crush girdle combine to make a generous bow at the right side, which introduces also a touch of gray. The tunic of this frock is full and gathered and falls an inch or two below the skirt, giving it extra length. The neckline and sleeves are untrimmed.

IN a charming beige foulard figured in black, the wide black satin girdle is held in place by straps of the dress tissue through which it is run, and the girdle is finished at one side by a self ruffle. This frock has the full circular skirt with scalloped edge that is so well liked this season. A ruffle of accordion pleated beige chiffon finishes the round neck.

HUGE PARADE TO GREET HOOVER IN BOSTON

Shoe Manufacturers and Tanners Plan Royal Welcome for Secretary of Commerce

Herbert C. Hoover, secretary of commerce, is to be royally entertained during his visit to Boston on Tuesday of next week when he will address a mass meeting of prominent shoe and leather men at the National Shoe Style Show in Mechanics building.

Shoe factories and tanneries all over New England will close down for a half holiday to permit their employes to take part in a monster parade of escort that will turn out in honor of Mr. Hoover's visit. It is estimated that there will be at least 15,000 marchers in line.

A committee of 100 leading shoe manufacturers and tanners, headed by Herbert T. Drake, president of the New England Shoe and Leather Association, is hard at work making plans to entertain the secretary. Mayor Peters has already pledged his aid and will act as host at breakfast and it is expected that Governor Cox will also aid in entertaining the guest of honor.

The secretary is coming to Boston to talk the shoe and leather men of the splendid opportunities in foreign trade.

Plans for the parade are in the hands of Major Charles T. Cahill of the United Shoe Machinery Corporation, who will act as chief of staff. Practically every organization in the trade has been invited to send a delegation.

"Don't rub your youth away!"

RUBBING on the washboard for hours each week makes a woman grow old faster than any other work she has to do.

Today hundreds of thousands of women are saving themselves this needless drudgery. They have learned to let Rinso take the place of all those hours of exhausting work.

Rinso is made by the makers of Lux, the largest soap makers in the world. After years of experimenting, they have perfected a soap product which takes all the hard rubbing out of washing.

Rinso loosens and dissolves the dirt from even the heaviest pieces of the weekly wash, without injury to a single fabric.

Don't rub your youth away. Try doing next week's washing with Rinso. Get it today from your grocer or any department store. Lever Bros. Co. Cambridge, Mass.

DISSOLVE—For each tub of clothes thoroughly dissolve a half package of Rinso in two quarts of boiling water. (Others in hard or clothes extra dirty, use more Rinso.)

POUR INTO TUB of lukewarm water—mix well. Keep adding the solution until you get a good, rich, lasting, soapy suds even after the clothes have been put in.

WASHING MACHINE OWNERS get beautifully white clothes with Rinso—follow the regular directions given here, adding a fresh Rinso solution before operating machine. The results are wonderful.

Rinso 8¢
Made in U.S.A.

Then let your clothes soak—and rinse without any hard rubbing—Soak one hour—two hours—overnight—whatever time is convenient. Those wonderful mild suds loosen every particle of dirt. Rinso, to remove the loosened dirt, till the water runs clear.

LAWRENCE MAN RELATES IRISH HORRORS

J. F. McGrath, Back From Business Tour, Says Erin Expects U. S. Aid

Lawrence, July 5.—"The people of panic-stricken Ireland are looking to America to do something for them," said James F. McGrath, Lawrence merchant, who has just arrived home after a visit there. He was one of a party of sixty American business men which represented the United States in a recent eight-week tour of the British Isles.

Because of the conditions in Ireland, Mr. McGrath declared he could only stay three days on Irish soil, making a short trip to his birthplace in Galway and to relatives in Schulme and Dublin.

He visited the home of a cousin in Galway and heard sorrowful tales of the Black and Tans. His cousin was studying at a medical school and had just returned to visit his mother when Black and Tans entered the home at midnight and took the young man away in a lorrie. He was taken some distance and the names of all the Sein Feiners he knew were asked of him. When he replied that he was at school and did not know any Sein Feiners he was brutally assaulted.

"I doubt if he will ever be able to finish his medical course and received a degree so severely was he hurt," Mr. McGrath declared. He told of two young men who were taken from their home nearby.

Several shots were imbedded in their bodies, which were thrown into the sea. One of the young men died. The other sought to rescue his father, summoning a priest. The soldiers learned of the priest's visit to the stricken home and the next day administered the clergyman a severe beating.

Raymond Syndicate 1,000 Strong at Outing

AGNES JENNESS.

President Frank L. Dorr of the Raymond Syndicate was host yesterday at a novel Fourth of July party held on his Framingham estate and attended by 1,000 Raymond Company employes and their families.

There were sports for the young and old, the fat and the lean. There was music and dancing, and a little midway. There were good things to eat, and there was a mock-heroic "review" of the employes passing in military formation before President Dorr's reviewing stand on his piazza.

The party left Park square in the forenoon in twelve special trolley cars.

Members of various departments were costumed to represent characters in the Raymond newspaper advertisements, such as "Uncle Eph," "Si Toller and his wife." First prize went to the boys' department in charge of J. C. Goode.

There were boxing matches between William Shuhan and Harry Thompson and Frank McNamee and Harry Wolf, and a blindfolded boxing bout between John J. Hurid and Tommy Lehy, a professional.

With the mercury loitering about the 100 mark the fat men's race, baseball game for adults and pie-eating contests were called off.

Music was by the Framingham band and there was dancing on the freshly swept barn floor.

The party returned to Boston late in the afternoon.

Mr. Dorr was assisted by the following committee: A. W. Phinney, superintendent of the Raymond store; Mr. Harding, Nelson Gilder, John Woodman, Warren Fowler, John Flitz, James Goode, Louis Heindel, Frank Flitz, E. Rothschild, J. J. McNutt, George Brown, S. R. Renfrew, Catherine Madden, Alice Clark, Isabelle Patten, Katherine King, J. William Bigney, T. O'Rourke, H. Thompson and E. Fordyce.

REPORT CARUSO WILL SING NO MORE

Famous Opera Star, Ill in Italy, Fears That His Voice Is Gone

New York, July 5.—Grand opera's most valuable possession, the voice of Enrico Caruso in his prime, is apparently lost forever.

Captain Charles Anthony Fulton of the army Intelligence Service, who returned from Italy today expressed the opinion that the tenor would never recover his old strength of voice. He said that when he saw Caruso the latter was in poor health.

Captain Fulton said that Caruso clasped his hands and muttered tearfully that he would sing no more; that is, he would sing no more as he once was able.

It was also stated that doctors in Italy were pessimistic about the chances of Caruso for recovering his full voice power.

Here's why CAMELS are the quality cigarette

BECAUSE we put the utmost quality into this one brand. Camels are as good as it's possible for skill, money and lifelong knowledge of fine tobaccos to make a cigarette.

Nothing is too good for Camels. And bear this in mind! Everything is done to make Camels the best cigarette it's possible to buy. Nothing is done simply for show.

Take the Camel package for instance. It's the most perfect packing science can devise to protect cigarettes and keep them fresh. Heavy paper—secure foil wrapping—revenue stamp to seal the fold and make the package air-tight. But there's nothing flashy about it. You'll find no extra wrappers. No frills or furbelows.

Such things do not improve the smoke any more than premiums or coupons. And remember—you must pay their extra cost or get lowered quality.

If you want the smoothest, mellowest, mildest cigarette you can imagine—and one entirely free from cigaretty aftertaste,

It's Camels for you.

MRS. FOSS GIVES OUT STRONG STATEMENT

Well Known Mass. Woman Says Tanlac Would Be in Every Home if People Knew Its Value as She Does—Health Restored.

Another wonderful endorsement of Tanlac that will be read with interest by thousands of frail, suffering people in Boston and vicinity was given by Mrs. Eunice Foss, a highly esteemed resident of 162 Pierce St., Malden, Mass., a few days ago.

Mrs. Foss has resided in Malden for the past ten years and her many friends will be glad to learn that she is now enjoying splendid health. And in describing her case and failure to havetoforo find relief, Mrs. Foss said:

"For the past three years my whole system seemed out of order. My appetite was so poor I scarcely averaged two good meals a day and I would break such a stuffed-up, bloated feeling after eating that I could hardly get my breath. This indigestion troubled me so at night that I often had to get up and walk the floor. There was a burning sensation like fire in the pit of my stomach. Many foods I could not eat at all and the ones I like best seemed to hurt me the worst.

"My nerves were all upset so that even the door bell ringing and other noises I have always been accustomed to hear would distract me. My sleep was never sound and many nights I heard the clock every time it struck, and then got up nervous and tired and weak I could hardly prepare the breakfast, often having to go back to bed. I had lost considerable weight and was all run-down.

"On the advice of a friend from Lynn, Mass., I began taking Tanlac and now I prize it above every medicine. The very first bottle brought fine results and four bottles have built me up until I am feeling fine. I am not troubled any more with gas, bloating, shortness of breath or any other signs of indigestion and my appetite is so keen that I can hardly eat enough to satisfy me. I used to have headaches that almost set me wild, but Tanlac has done away with them, just as it has with my other troubles. My nerves are perfectly steady and I sleep from eight to ten hours every night without even waking one time. Since taking Tanlac I have had strength to clean my entire room home—even did the varnishing and everything—something I could not have possibly done last year. I have gained a lot in weight and have not felt so well in years. I just can't praise Tanlac enough and if everybody knew its value as I do there would be a bottle in every home in Massachusetts."

Tanlac is distributed by International Prop., Inc., and sold in Boston by all Liggett's drug stores.—Advertisement.

GOLFERS GATHER FOR STATE AMATEUR TOURNEY AT WORCESTER

BIG ENTRY FOR TITLE TUSSLE

Ouimet, Guilford and Wright Among Those Entered for Link Classic

By Robert E. Harlow.

Officials of the Massachusetts Golf Association met today to make the draw for the State amateur championship, to be held at the Worcester Country Club, beginning tomorrow with a qualifying round of thirty-six holes.

* * *

More than 100 Massachusetts golfers handicapped at ten strokes and under have entered for the event, and with Francis Ouimet, Jesse Guilford and Fred Wright, Jr., Boston members of the international team, among the number, the tournament will not lack for stars.

* * *

The Worcester course withstood the dry spell better than many others, as it is laid out on low land and the soil is rich. The recent rains brought it back into real green condition and golfers who practiced there over the week end declare it will be at its best by Wednesday.

* * *

A number of Boston golfers left for Worcester today in order to practice, as the course was open to contestants. Stanley Brennan, chairman of the tournament committee, has announced that club members will meet morning trains from Boston tomorrow to carry players to the course. He says that the field of slightly more than 100 will be able to play the two qualifying rounds without crowding.

Last year the championship was held at Brookline, with an eighteen-hole qualifying round, and players with scores of 85 and better made the match play. It is estimated that nothing worse than 170 will qualify at Worcester.

COMPLETE ENTRY FOR TITLE GOLF

One hundred and one entries have been received for the Massachusetts amateur golf championship tournament which starts tomorrow at the Worcester Country Club.

The qualifying round will consist of 36 holes medal play. The best 32 Score will be eligible for the match play rounds on Thursday and Friday. On Saturday the final match for the title will be at 36 holes.

Tomorrow morning, starting at 9 o'clock, the first couple of the entrants will start their first eighteen holes. From then on with four minutes' difference in time up to 12:18, the other pairs will be given the word to start play.

GEORGES' INTELLIGENCE

It Was Absent at Jersey City Bout Dempsey Had Monopoly on Brains

By JACK CONWAY

Georges Carpentier is a very intelligent type of fighter, while Jack Dempsey is the cave-man of the ring, according to some of the young men and sob sisters who were at the ringside at Jersey City. This writer occupied a seat five feet from where Carpentier and Dempsey battled. We were in a position to see every move made by each boxer. And we unhesitatingly state that of the two men Dempsey displayed the greater intelligence. Georges proved a gallant, dashing fighter, but not once during the entire contest did he do anything which would convince onlookers that he possessed more intelligence than Dempsey.

* * *

When the bell sounded at the opening of the first round, Carpentier leaped from his corner and displayed a willingness to exchange punches with the champion in the centre of the ring. This was lure, not an example of intelligence. Every body at the ringside who knew anything about fighting immediately realized the contest would be over in a few rounds, with Dempsey the victor. This writer sent a message to his office to the effect that it looked like a quick win for Dempsey. It did not require any rare judgment to see that a frail, highly nervous boxer like Carpentier could not hope to successfully exchange blows with a great fighter like Dempsey.

* * *

The Frenchman might have lasted eight or ten rounds, and possibly the entire distance, if he had boxed with the champion instead of trying to imitate the rough, mauling tactics of a Jeffries. By boxing at long range Carpentier might have found more openings for his famous right-hand punch—the blow that almost dropped Dempsey to the mat in the second round.

* * *

When at close quarters Carpentier also failed to show signs of great intelligence. He made virtually no effort to tie up the Dempsey attack. He merely kept his head lowered and pulled his arms in toward his body. Dempsey would then calmly bring his clublike punches down on the Frenchman's neck near the base of the brain. Carpentier would lurch forward as the smashes landed, and "Tiger Jack" would quickly shift his attack to the body. At no point in the bout did Georges make any real effort to offset Dempsey's work at close quarters. And still many learned writers devoted columns of space to telling their readers of the rare intelligence the challenger displayed. Maybe it is intelligence in the year 1921 for a man to walk calmly toward the mouth of a cannon during target practice. This was the type of intelligence shown by Carpentier.

* * *

You very naturally ask how did Dempsey prove he was intelligent? In the first place, he did not underestimate the ability of his opponent. He entered the ring weighing 188 pounds, which meant that he had trained hard and faithfully for the contest. Once the battle started Dempsey was quick to realize that the easiest way to weaken his opponent was by body punches. If Georges was so unwise as to stay at close quarters, Dempsey was quick enough to take advantage of his opponent's error. He pounded away at will. Several times Dempsey had openings for right-hand punches to the jaw, but he did not care to leave himself unguarded for a counter attack. He knew it would be only a question of minutes before Carpentier would be helpless.

* * *

Dempsey boxed straight up in the first two rounds. This left his jaw partly unprotected. When the champion found out in the second round that Carpentier could score with right-hand punches to the jaw, he immediately shifted his style. He opened the third session fighting from a crouch. His head was pulled down between his shoulders, his hands held up as to protect his jaw. He then walked to close quarters. Carpenter tried to score with his right, but his blows either landed high on Dempsey's head or went over the champion's shoulders. Dempsey's intelligence had eliminated Carpentier's only weapon of victory—a right-hand punch to the jaw. The titleholder devoted the third round to wearing Carpentier down.

* * *

Dempsey's intelligence told him the Frenchman was beaten as the fourth round started. He therefore opened up more, increased the length of his punches. He knew Georges did not have the strength to take advantage of an opening. The champion then knocked his opponent out.

* * *

What intelligence was displayed at Jersey City was exhibited by Dempsey. Carpentier, it is true, looks intelligent in his pictures. A pretty face, however, does not always mean that a man possesses real brains.

Medbury's Column

Smashing into society isn't as hard as it seems. All you've got to do is to learn a lot of big words and know how to eat with your fork.

Of course you don't want to think that it's easy to climb the social ladder just because you're a carpenter.

But if you've a lot of money some society dame may be willing to hold the ladder for you.

You've got to learn to hate publicity. If there are five papers in your town you don't want your name to appear in more than six of them.

Some people who hang into society simply loathe reporters and they absolutely refuse to be interviewed by more than four of them at once.

They hand the reporter a picture and tell him that he can show it to the city editor, but not to let him use it.

Then they get up at 6 o'clock in the morning and buy a paper to see whether he disappointed them.

A girl will say "My name's Mitchell: I spell it with an M, but don't mention it in the paper."

Society people have the worries as well as the rest of us. It's awfully hard to pick out the right colored uniform for your butler.

They have to hire a maid to watch the silverware and then they have to hire a detective to watch the maid.

Before you can become a full-fledged member of society you have to buy a swell limousine and learn how to despise pedestrians.

You have to hire a chauffeur who can bawl the pedestrians out for daring to be walking.

Then you have to employ a valet whose job is to remind you when it's Saturday and draw the water in the bathtub for you.

If he should dill the tub on Friday don't be him; perhaps you gave him a 1920 calendar.

When in doubt, take a bath anyway.

Should you be invited out to dinner, don't make a mistake and get there on time.

Always remember that it's vulgar to be hungry.

The best way to get along in society is to figure out the best thing to do—and then don't do it.

N. E. STARS WIN TITLES ON COAST

Thomson and Gourdin Take Firsts, While Driscoll and Connolly Get Seconds

Pasadena, July 4.—Eastern athletes were prominent among the winners in the National Championships held here today. Earl Thomson of Dartmouth lead a large field home in the 120 and 220-yard hurdles. Gourdin of Harvard had an easy time winning the broad jump with a leap of 23 feet 11½ inches.

Jake Driscoll ran a good second to Stevenson of the N. Y. A. C. in the 440-yard dash. In winning Stevenson broke the old record hung up by Tom Burke. Jimmy Connolly of Woburn ran a close second to Joie Ray, winner of the mile.

Winsor Club Wins

The Winsor Club of Watertown defeated the Parker Field Tennis Club of Lexington, four matches to one, on the Lexington Athletic Field courts, the matches featuring the tennis program at the first annual field day of the Lexington Council, N. 95, K. of C.

Concord on Top

The Concord baseball club defeated the Medford Athletic Association nine, 7 to 6, on the Concord Centre playground.

Big Gloves Cost Him Title, Says Georges

Paris, July 5.—Georges Carpentier still believes that he is able to knock out Jack Dempsey. He believes the reason he did not do so on July 2 at Jersey City was due to the bigness of the boxing gloves.

In an interview with the New York correspondent of L'Intransigeant, Carpentier declared:

"But for the last minute concession to the reformers to use eight-ounce instead of four-ounce gloves I would be heavyweight champion of the world today.

"The additional weight of the gloves saved Dempsey from a knockout in the second round."

BASEBALL LETTERS FOR TEN AT B. U.

The members of the Boston University baseball squad have been awarded their letters and sweaters by the action of the athletic council. They are as follows: Donald L. Miller of Waltham, Herman A. LEACH CROSS IN COME-BACK RING BOUT

Veteran Will Take on Duffy in Contest at Brockton

New York, July 5.—Among Leach Cross' host of old-time admirers there are any number who believe that the wonderful little fighting machine of former years can come back and beat most of the present lightweight contenders in the class led by Benny Leonard. They base their opinion on the wonderful showing Leach made against Gene Delmont, over whom he recently received the judge's decision in ten rounds.

Leach will face another tough opponent in West Side Jimmy Duffy, at Ebbets Field tomorrow night, and, should he be successful, will continue on in his campaign, asking on Benjamin, Welling, Mitchell, Jackson, Kansas and Dundee, in the order named as fast as Manager Sam Wallach can sign them up.

TRIPLE BILL FOR CONCORD GOLFERS

There was a triple bill in golf at the Concord Country Club on the holiday. In the forenoon, Murray Ballou and Morgan K. Smith were tied as winners in the handicap vs. par event, each being even. An approaching and putting contest in the afternoon first ended in a tie between Arthur B. Brooks, George N. White, Richard J. Eaton and Morgan K. Smith, Brooks winning the play-off, with a 7. The mixed foursome, 9-holes competition, also in the afternoon, was won by Miss M. D. Brooks and Morgan K. Smith, 46-11-35.

CARPENTIER IS TO SIZE UP MARTIN

New York, July 5.—Charley Ledoux, bantam-weight champion of Europe, has been added to the card of four twelve-round bouts that will be staged next Tuesday night at the Rosing Dome. Ledoux is matched with Joe Burman of Chicago. In the main event Bob Martin meets Frank Moran and Georges Carpentier will box at the Friendly Georges will look after Ledoux. Incidentally he will get a line on a pair of heavyweights, the winner of which may be matched with Carpentier.

HAPPY BACK HOME AFTER BIG BOUT

Happy, king of Bruins hockey, was back in town today after seeing the big bout.

"Carpentier is the greatest heavyweight since John L.," said Happy. "Carpentier is also a game fighter, but I think of a lot of daintier colleweights who could have beaten him.

BRAVES CLIMB AT EXPENSE OF PHILS

Oeschger Pitches Tribe to Victory in Morning; Scott Winner in Afternoon Game

Philadelphia, July 5.—The Braves won both holiday contests from the luckless Phillies, taking the morning contest, 6 to 4, and winning out in the afternoon, 3 to 2, in ten innings.

* * *

Joe Oeschger was the winning pitcher in the first contest, keeping the Phillies' nine hits well scattered though scored on four times. The Phillies jumped into the lead in the first inning, scoring two runs on the best hitting they did in the game. The Braves came back in the second inning with a run and tied in the third, when another tally was shoved over.

* * *

Then Oeschger and Meadows settled down and there wasn't the semblance of a tally until the eighth, when the Boston batsmen again got busy, driving the unspectacled hurler from the mound. They continued their merry tattoo on Relief Hurler Baumgartner and Keenan, getting two runs in the eighth and two more in the following session.

* * *

The Phils staged a last ditch rally and scored two runs before they were halted.

* * *

The Braves hopped out into the lead in the second inning of the second game, when they pushed over a single run. They were overlaked and passed in the fifth, when the Phils got their two runs, but came back and tied in the sixth. Thereafter it was only a question of time, as Scott tightened up and never gave the cellar champions another chance. In the tenth the winning runner was pushed over by the Braves.

PARIS SEES HOPE FOR CARPENTIER

Paris, July 5.—Despite Georges Carpentier's defeat by Jack Dempsey on Saturday the belief is current in Paris that Carpentier has not yet given up hope of becoming the heavyweight champion of the world. The press and sporting men think that there are a number of light heavyweights in the United States whom Carpentier could fight and who would prove first class training preparatory to another bid for the world title.

The excitement and interest in the fight has not yet completely subsided. Moving pictures of the match are eagerly awaited to see to obtain an exact description of the blows, particularly those leading to Carpentier's defeat. Contradictory descriptions were received, some crediting the uppercut to the jaw knocked out the Frenchman and others that a double blow in the stomach turned the trick.

Referee Kricks description of the fight, which was published here, impressed all sportsmen that the fight was a clean one and that Carpentier was beaten by superior strength and weight. Most sporting writers agree that Dempsey would have won.

Carpentier's account, wherein he said that he was completely beaten "after a loyal fight," was received with satisfaction. Carpentier paid homage to Dempsey's fighting qualities.

Carpentier's wife, wife of the defeated pugilist, was thrown into a state of deep distress by the false rumor that Georges had died after the fight. She had regained her composure today and is eagerly awaiting the return of her husband.

Georges' wife and cheer him on five future bouts," said Mme. Carpentier.

CARMAN WINNER OF 35-MILE RACE

Clarence Carman easily won the thirty-five mile motor paced race at Revere, taking the lead at the start and never being headed. George Chapman finished second, Charles Verleyn third and Joseph Wiley fourth. The time was forty-eight minutes fifty-seven and two-fifths seconds.

Winners and summaries of other races were:

Half-mile, amateur — Tom Logan, fifty-seven seconds.

Two-thirds mile, professional—Ralph Sproule, one minute and fifteen seconds.

Three miles, amateur — Angelo Ardinio, seven minutes one and one-fifth seconds.

Five miles, professional—Tom Grimm, eleven minutes six and two-fifths seconds.

Special Pursuit race 4Mile and four and one-half laps—Ray Culpepper, five minutes thirty-nine and one-fifth seconds.

YOUNG MONTREAL DEFEATS WHITE

Woonsocket, R. I., July 5.—Young Montreal of Providence fought twelve fast rounds with Jakey White of Boston here tonight and won. It was a no-decision affair arranged when White was loaned that Champion Lynch, who is scheduled to have been Montreal's opponent, had injured his hand during the first round of the bout and would be unable to fight.

The bout was fast from the gong to the finish and Montreal had his own working nicely and he used it overtime on White's face and head. He also stabbed many a fast left into the Albany boy's midriff.

White showed some beautiful left hooks that sent Monty back on his heels. He also shot over some good right swings that connected with Monty's chin.

Montreal won the newspaper decision.

LEXINGTON CASEYS WIN GAME, 12 TO 8

The Lexington Caseys, No. 34, Knights of Columbus, defeated the Concord Junction nine, 12 to 8, in a free-hitting contest on the Lexington Athletic Field.

Klaby rushed Shevlin as the bout opened and forced him to the ropes with a straight left and a right uppercut which sent the Lawrence boxer reeling back. The round was Shevlin's by a wide margin.

Not until the ninth round was Shevlin in any danger in this session. Klaby tore after his opponent and landed numerous hard jabs. Shevlin, however, covered up well and blocked many of Klaby's well intended punches.

The boxers weighed in at 11 a. m. yesterday and each was under the prescribed limit of 165 pounds.

WHAT HAD HAPPENED

Dick Quarren, young and wealthy, but more than usual loneliness, has been in love with Strelsa Vane, who had been engaged to Quarren's friend Hope Danforth. Hope, after a year's absence, returns from Europe and claims Strelsa. Quarren, at a dinner party, hears Strelsa tell Hope that she is eager to do so. Some time later, Quarren, who has been interested in Strelsa's movements, is amused by her attempt to befriend Mrs. Hope Danforth, who has been cut by the women of the fashionable set. FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

Not the independence, but the interdependence of individuals, industries, agriculture, transportation, finance, employers and employes, nations—the whole world, in short—has been brought home to us during the last twelve months.

* * *

It has been brought home to us that the entire business world must be regarded as one huge economic body and that every part of this body must function satisfactorily if the health of the body is to be maintained. The United States may regard itself as the head of this body, but the head will feel rather sick if the rest of the body be writhing in pain.

* * *

The experience we have, and still are passing through, should have a wholesome effect upon various groups in this country. Our agricultural population have learned that they cannot prosper unless the industries of the nation prosper. The commercial and mercantile folk have learned that the prosperity of the farmer is essential to their own prosperity. All have learned that sound, solvent transportation companies are necessary to a secure and solvent industry and trade. Lenders have learned rapacity on their part leads to retribution in general activity. Profiteering builders have learned that iniquitously high charges paralyze building operations.

* * *

Still more important: Workers have learned that profits and prosperity must be enjoyed by employers if they themselves are to enjoy good wages and full time work.

* * *

Out of all this should come better understanding, better co-operation, better business, better living conditions. Depressions, bankruptcies, unemployment, spring chiefly from lack of reasonable give-and-take, from violating the golden rule, that most practical principle for the guidance alike of individuals, business and nations. It is because of the wider and fuller recognition of this fundamental fact that one is justified looking for the evolution of better times for the human family.

Turning to events affecting business, finance and securities, one finds much that points to early improvement.

It must be frankly admitted, however, that actual recovery in business, in employment and in unduly low prices has been disappointingly slow. The second half of 1921 opens amid pronounced dullness in trade, widespread stagnation and unfortunately extensive unemployment, intense unsettlement in securities and acute pessimism in many directions.

Yet the outlook for the balance of the year is very encouraging, provided broad-gauge action and policies are pursued by those in high place and by those in the ranks.

* * *

Inspiring developments have lately been coming thick and fast. For example:

Interest rates for legitimate business borrowers have distinctly declined. Increased credits are steadily thawing out, credit over-expansion is being corrected, and bank reserves are now so high as to be ample to cope with all the increase in business which is likely to develop.

* * *

Through wage reductions, increased labor efficiency and some modification of various freight rates, production costs have declined in most directions.

The administration is tackling the reduction of governmental expenses with a vigor that promises valuable results, thus paving the way for necessary tax burden-which has been a millstone around the neck of enterprise.

* * *

The termination of our "state of war" with Germany, the success already achieved by Germany in meeting reparation payments, the settlement of the ruinous British coal strike, the change in Russia's attitude, and the progress made by other European countries toward rehabilitation, have combined to brighten the whole international outlook. The better prices which have ruled for grain, the diminution of effect of farm help at moderate wages, the more adequate measures taken to furnish credit, and the decline in goods which will be purchased, have served to restore a larger measure of prosperity and cheerfulness among our fellow-citizens by important agricultural support.

The helpful attitude now taken by the administration toward the railroads, the prospect that the roads are to be helped financially by the government, the reduction in idle cars and the gratifying improvement in railroad earnings, form another heartening feature of the situation.

It can at least be said that the latest tariff developments have not had any unsettling effect.

* * *

Of course, the picture still contains dark shades, but these receive so much attention that they need not be described here. It should be mentioned, however, that now steel prices schedules are being prepared and that they are expected to be accompanied by another reduction in wages.

If the new prices are low enough to convince the railroads and other large consumers that the bottom has been reached, the steel industry may easily undergo transformation from a state of almost unprecedented stagnation to a state of remarkable activity.

* * *

Many securities, both stocks and bonds, are still bargains. The expected irregularity has not been absent, and although it may possibly continue a little longer, there are growing indications that a definite turn is approaching.

Stocks Heavy in New York at Noon; Money Opens at 6 Per Cent.; Sterling Down

MEXICAN PETE DOWN SIX POINTS

Bears Resume Their Drive Against the Doheny Issue; Steels Are Weak

By W. H. ROSS.
Financial Editor.

Stocks were heavy in New York at noon, most of the active issues showing losses. Steels were weak, the leading one of a group of heavies and Crucible more than two. The forenoon feature was the renewal of the bear drive against Mexican Petroleum. The latest attack was based upon a Tampico report that the new law was causing a general curtailment of oil operations. This issue was off 6 5-8 at the morning low-point. The market was comparatively dull, first hour transactions aggregating less than 125,000 shares.

Call money opened at 6 per cent. The initial quotation for demand sterling was $3.73, a decline of 5c.

A New York dispatch said: "E. L. Doheny, president of Mexican Petroleum Company did not call on the Secretary, unofficially or officially, his name was on the passenger list."

OPENING TREND IRREGULAR.

The market had an irregular opening after a three-day holiday and showed mixed tendencies during the first hour. Trading was quiet. There were some gains and the undertone seemed inclined to firmness, but the undertone seemed firmer than in most cases prior changes in small lots. Rubber for delivery fluctuating a point. Mexican Petroleum continued to inspire the most interest, selling pressure was largely concentrated upon this stock. It opened with a fractional loss and then declined to a new low price for the three years. It was down almost six points at 11, several hundred shares receded more than two points. Royal Dutch and Houston were strong with the former moving up nearly to the high hour and the latter showing a substantial gain. Rubber sold at the lowest since 1917. American Sugar soon receded three points and General Asphalt preferred 4 points. Atlantic Gulf was another weak issue.

RAILS WERE QUIET.

Rails were quiet and had a fractional range. But although there were losses of this department carriers had a good tone on the whole. Belief obtains that the legislation at Washington will be beneficial to transportation interests and speedy relief from present financial obligations through the agreement of government indebtedness is expected. Steels were heavy this morning. U. S. Steel declining a fraction and Crucible 1½. Motors were unsettled in the early session. This was the case with equipments, tobaccos and the list in general. American Sugar was the only active issue of its kind. American Woolen was a strong specialty.

Wall Street Briefs

According to a Washington telegram to a New York broker favorable capitol news on the Mexican oil situation is expected this week.

The Wyoming dispatch says that the Midwest Refining Company has struck oil and sand in the Salt Creek district below the Shannon pool.

The Royal Dutch Co. directorate at the annual meeting recommended a dividend for 1920 at 25 per cent, on ordinary shares, 2 per cent on preferred and 10 per cent on profits shares.

The Department of the United States and Canada's credit to Europe are steadily thawing out, credit over-expansion is being corrected, and bank reserves are now so high as to be ample to cope with all the increase in business which is likely to develop.

In May there were 32,250,011 pounds of refined copper exported, as against 44,277,441, a month previous, and 40,256,020 pounds, valued at $5,230,580, in April. In the eleven months to May exports amounted to 403,736,324 pounds, with a value of $66,840,211, compared with 681,395,654 pounds, valued at $111,-862,668, in the corresponding period of 1913, the last normal year.

Building Operations

In its review for May the Federal Reserve Board states that the value of building contracts awarded in the Boston district for the month was $18,000,000, a slight increase over April figures. In New York district value of contracts awarded increased to $58,800,000, of which $37,000,000 was for residential construction. In Philadelphia an increase of 50 per cent. was recorded, while in Richmond district there was a slight decrease.

Canadian Crops

Ottawa, July 5.—D. B. Hanna, president of the Canadian National Railways, says of the Western crops: "In all my twenty-five years' experience with conditions in the West, I never saw them look more favorable at this time of year. I expect a bumper crop, that is this year's crop, which had a record-breaking yield of 350,000,000 bushels of wheat in the Western provinces, will yield at this point to 300,000,000 bushels at least."

Lower Wholesale Prices

At the end of April, this year, wholesale prices were but 43 per cent. on the average above the prices ruling in 1913, as against 61 at the corresponding time in 1920. The purchasing power of the dollar was done to thirty-eight cents in 1913 last year, but is now estimated at seventy cents. Prices for corn, oats, cotton and hides were lower in April this year, than in April, 1915.

LOCAL STOCKS RULE LOWER IN BOSTON

Boston Market Dull and Narrow During Forenoon; Curb Shows Strength

The tone on the Boston exchange was somewhat heavy at the opening and losses were generally lost from wind later in the forenoon. But there were enough gains to make the list irregular as well. The market was dull and had no more breadth than usual. United Fruit gained a little more than a point, and issues to recede from one to two were U. S Smelting, American Sugar common and preferred, Central preferred and Boston & Maine C. The last named receded to its first sale in several weeks. Boston & Maine began with a small loss but recovered and for a while was among the leaders. Packing issues ruled lower, and copper-bearing and Metropolitan Coal Telephone made a firmer tone. Telephone made a new high at 51. American Telephone made a trifling gain.

Among the miscellaneous stocks were Ventures, Carson Hill, Libby, Swift & Co. and Agricultural Chemical common. Small gains were made by Copper Range, Old Dominion, National Leather, Wickwire and Utah Consolidated.

CURB ISSUES HIGHER.

The Curb had a dull start but most active issues came in exchange mid-morning. The market was firmer. Most active were Boston & Montana and Crystal. At the end of an hour Crystal was up 2 cents at 55 cents and Alpha 1 cent at 78 cents. Verde Mines was off 1 cent, selling at 15 cents. Boston & Montana had opened with a small gain at 32 cents but by mid-morning sold unchanged from its closing price of Friday last.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, July 5.—Following the lead of rallies, which were much stronger than had been due, the cotton market opened with an advance of 13 to 21 points. A good part of the buying was ascribed to the covering of shorts, while New Orleans and Southern were credited with some buying on the theory that unsettled weather would affect the crop. Prices opened about 23 points net higher. The market ruled steady during the early trading on the holidays. About seven months were sold during this morning's session, July, 11.90; October, 12.60; December, 13.09; January, 13.18; March, 13.48; May, 13.77; June, 13.78.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, July 5.—Wheat opened 1¾c to 3¼c higher, September 1.23 to 1.23¼, and then declined to 1.21¾, September 1.21¾ to 1.21¾, December 1.24¾ to 1.25, September 1.21¾ to 1.21¾, September 1.21¾ to 1.21¾, December 60 to 59½, Oats—July, 36 to 36¾; September, 38 to 38¾; December, 40¾.

BUILDING TRADE OF NATION IMPROVING

Spillane Says Material, Men and Workers Must Make More Concessions

By RICHARD SPILLANE.

Philadelphia, July 5. — There is evidence throughout the country of improvements in the building industry. Whether the improvement will broaden or be of short duration depends wholly upon the manner in which employers and employes meet conditions. If material men and contractors are content with very small profits and workmen are willing to labor for reasonable wages a real start can be made. If they are not, they will suffer and so will the public.

Naturally all concerned will want to get all they can out of the operations. Man was born with a grasping disposition. He might anything for a child and the infant will reach for it, but give him all he can and he will want. Only by education does the child learn the difference between right and wrong and not always then.

In business the impulse is to get the largest possible profit. Experience has proved small profits quick on trade and large ones deaden it.

In the years following the close of the war business defied experience and the result was prostration. There has been a slow recovery. It remains to be seen if the American people have learned that American workman have returned to their former common sense.

Great Britain is facing the same situation. Here, in part, is what Sir Charles Ellison, Director General of Housing, told the Directors of the Amalgamated Housing Industries, Ltd., at a meeting in the Savoy Hotel, London, the other day:

"The difficulties have been increased by gross profiteering of various branches of the industry. The building of houses has been made impossible by enormous increases in the cost of building. The workman has only done his bit towards hindering building construction when he knew that only by doing so would the workman will stop, too. Looking at the fairly and squarely, there has been profiteering in all branches of the trade. The employer has profiteered as a direct result and the workman has profiteered."

"SEVEN YEARS BAD LUCK"

Gathering impetus as it goes, "Seven Years Bad Luck," the Robertson-Cole super-special comedy with Max Linder, which opened yesterday at the Park Theatre, winds up with the greatest outburst of real humor ever found in any pictures on the screen. It is a combination of screamingly funny comedian and a cracker-jack story.

To give credit where credit is due, it must be stated that not only does Max Linder play the leading role in "Seven Years Bad Luck," but he wrote and directed it.

Max Linder returning to the screen after a absence of five years during which time he gained glory with the French army in the trenches. He has been sadly missed because of his clean-cut humor. Eliminating entirely the slap-stick style of comedy used in his picture, the comedian keeps his audience in roars of laughter by sheer cleverness.

For a change we have a title that means something to the picture. "Seven Years Bad Luck" means just that. Max breaks a mirror in the first reel and the old superstitious hoodoo stalks him night and day. There are many pretty girls and beautiful scenes. A real live lioness is introduced and Max takes some desperate but funny chances with the ladyship. The cast in support is an excellent one.

Rex Novak, the beautiful girl who won her first conspicuous screen success in "Wanted at Headquarters," charmed yesterday in her latest Universal photodrama, "Wolves of the North."

The story was written and directed by Norman Dawn and produced in the Far North by a talented cast of popular players.

FOUR BEARS VEX BERKSHIRE FARMERS

North Adams, July 5.—Four large black bears are roaming the hills in Zoar, report says, from here, and are causing much alarm to farmers in that section. The bears have been seen on two different occasions by George Canedy, a Zoar farmer, on the summit of Todd Mountain near a pasture where Mr. Canedy keeps cows. So far they have not chased any one nor so far as is known, they have not killed any yards on livestock.

Boy Breaks Ankle

John T. Hayes, seventeen years old, of No. 3 Cliff place, Roxbury, fell from the rocks while playing on Castle Island and fractured his right ankle. He was taken to the City Hospital.

TRIBUTE OF MUSICIANS

"A good cross section of what is being done in America by American musicians today," is the way Chalmers Clifton, who has general direction of the music for the forthcoming pageant, "The Pilgrim Spirit," at Plymouth, describes the musical part of the production.

The first performances of the pageant, which is written and directed by Professor George P. Baker, of Harvard, is scheduled for July 13. Subsequent performances will be held July 14, 15, 16; July 20, August 1, 2, 3, and August 10, 11, 12 and 13.

MUSICIANS' TRIBUTE.

Chalmers Clifton explains that while it was impossible to find a place for every American musician or note to be performed, he has designed to last only two hours, a genuine effort was made to have the music thoroughly representative of American musical effort in all schools, in order that, as he puts it, the final result might be "a nation-wide tribute from American musicians to what is fine in the Pilgrim spirit."

How catholic Mr. Clifton was to his choice of composers may be shown by the names of those who have contributed of their best to make the celebration a Pilgrimage every way worthy of the occasion and of the theme. Represented in the pageant program, in addition to Mr. Clifton, are: George Chadwick, Arthur E. Foote, John H. Rowell, Horatio Parker, Leo Sowerby, Frederick S. Converse, Edward Burlingame Hill and Arthur Shelley.

ALL GIVE FREELY.

"All of these men," Mr. Clifton says, "have been content with no personal reward, but have given freely of their best. The result is that for this pageant we have got no mere occasional music, but compositions which show that the distinguished musicians were content to really felt the significance of their theme in the very marrow of their bones."

Each of the pageant will be interpreted by Gallo's Symphony Band of seventy-five under the direction of Mr. Clifton himself.

News of Motion Picture World

By FRIEDA DAVIS

WHEREVER Mary Thurman goes now a crowd immediately gathers. She's becoming so used to it that unless she has a train of followers she feels lonely. The cause of it all is the new way she's doing her hair.

Some months ago Mary Thurman had her hair bobbed—according to the traditions of the Hollywood screen player now—but in her spare time having it curled. The picture at the left shows what a success it was.

Then one day Miss Thurman, graduate of the Mack Sennett bathing contingent, went to the beach to swim—and got her hair wet. She couldn't get it curled and had to go home with it hanging straight. "Why it looks marvelous!" exclaimed. "Your hair is stunning that way. Why don't you keep it that way?"

She went home, looked into the mirror, and proceeded to cut a bang across her forehead. The picture at the right shows what a success that was, too. "Some people," she remarked the other day, "say it's great and some say it's terrible. It's a comfort and it is unusual, isn't it?"

ALMA RUBENS IS CAST.

OWING to illness Delores Owen, who played the leading roles in two recent Metropolitan productions, "The Woman Changed," shown on the screen a short time ago, and "Hark Boy," a Harst story not yet released, will not be able to play the lead in the Arthur Somers Roche company now filming "Find the Woman."

Alma Rubens.

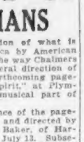
Alma Rubens, the leading lady of "Humoresque," has been chosen to fill Miss Owen's place. Others in the cast are Elleen Sedgwick, Harrison Ford, George MacQuarrie, Jacqueline Logan and Tom Forman, who has just finished work on the Lionel Barrymore film, "The Copperhead," in which he held the megaphone on this story.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO SIGNS.

Motion picture one person who well-deserved recognition through the film version of the Ibanez novel, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." First, Rex Ingram came to the fore as far as the public was concerned. Those on the "inside" of picture production had realized before that he would make more than of-the-while films.

Others to benefit by the picture are June Mathis, the scenarist; Rudolph Valentino, the "Julio" of "The Four Horsemen," and Alice Terry, the "Marguerite" of the story. Valentino followed up his work by an equally good performance in the screening of "The Conquering Power," and he has been in demand as a leading man by all the big companies. Famous Players-Lasky wins the race for Valentino's services and announces that he has been signed up to play the lead in the George Melford production, "The Sheik."



IT LOOKED like a pretty bad combination—the girl, Julius forces with the financial backing of John Graham, and Somerville—behind the scenes. But the picture they DO read the stories they illustrate, regardless of what people say. The story declares that a girl had kissed a man that she had met but four hours before. Sheila Athlone scoffed.

The author, Brian Moore, didn't scoff. "I'll show her!" he declared to the editor, and went out to make Sheila kiss him before Finis Fox. He had a hard time but succeeded with one minute to spare. In the end she illustrated the story.

Wanda Hawley is very attractive as Sheila but hardly possesses the requisite vamp-like personality. Ralph Connor's story, was directed by King Vidor, the young director genius, whose "Turn in the Road" was heralded as one of the best pictures of the past year. It is released by Associated First National Exhibitors, Inc., as a Catherine Curtis production.

GORDON'S OLD SOUTH AND ONLY—

What may be rightly termed two of the most delightful and artistic productions yet seen on the screen is the foreign films, "Gypsy Blood" and "Passion," released by Pioneer Film Corp. Pauline Frederick's immortal "Madame," which has been a feature at Gordon's Old South and Gordon's Olympia Theatre last night. Polo Negri is the star in the role of La Carmencita, and this latest vehicle demonstrated that she is a star from now on and the ocean is an artist of the first rank. In "Passion," in which Pola Negri made her debut on the American screen, she was a marvel. In "Gypsy Blood" she portrays the fiery little cigarette girl as the role has never been portrayed before.

BOSTON THEATRE—"If Women Only Knew."

Two monologues based on Balzac's "Meditations on Marriage," and adapted by Eric Hudson, opened at the Boston Theatre yesterday. The story is a wholesome one, which should appeal to all who believe in the love of a true girl as against the hollowness of society and the city. Friend and Downing head the vaudeville in "By Friend Abe," Other acts are Ethel Clifford and Elsie Clark in songs, Jack Adams and the Thirteen Girls, Raymond and Lyle and Sylvia Loyal and Company.

WALTHAM K. OF C. STAGE FIELD DAY

Several thousand persons from Waltham and vicinity attended a field day at the Athletic Field, Waltham, under the auspices of the William Council, Knights of Columbus. The program included a parade, band concert, sports and outdoor dancing

REVUE HEADS KEITH BILL

The Four Marx Brothers appeared as the headliners at Keith's Theatre, heading a pleasing vaudeville bill with their elaborate new revue called "On the Mezzanine Floor." The revue is by Herman Timberg, featuring Hattie Darling and other capable supporters.

Then there was another revue to round out the bill, a "thumbnail" sketch, "Alice in Blunderland," a combination of satire, farce and travesty, which was well received. In this Florens Ames and Adelaide Winthop appeared, favorite comedians lately featured with Raymond Hitchcock in "Hitchy Koo."

Tamae Kajiyama, "the American-made Japanese with the Napoleonic mentality," gave mystifying demonstrations of quadruple mind concentration, which even Einstein might be troubled to explain.

The bill was one of the best in weeks and the various numbers were heartily applauded.

Plays That Remain

TREMONT THEATRE—

The holiday audience at the Tremont Theatre last evening found pleasure in the antics of Comedians and "The O'Brien Girl" striking the true note of enjoyment and fitting to the day, which marked the beginning of the tenth week of this attraction in Boston. The cheer and the attraction appears to be of never-ending variety, and it continues to pile up attendance records with pleasing regularity.

GLOBE THEATRE—

"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," the visualization of Vicente Ibanez' thrilling story, moves from the Tremont Theatre to the Globe Theatre next Monday to continue its remarkable Boston run. The admirable effects that have embellish the presentation and heighten its pleasure-giving qualities of the picture production at the Temple will be retained for the Globe Theatre engagement.

BIBLE PAGEANT AT WELLESLEY

Wellesley is to witness another pageant tomorrow, when the public will be invited to the presentation on the outdoor stage of a work entitled "The Sinner Beloved," depicting the experiences of the prophet Hosea and his wife. The pageant is a feature of the Conference for Church Work, now in session at Wellesley.

Other Theatres

ORPHEUM THEATRE—

Great holiday crowds attended Lowe's beautiful Orpheum Theatre yesterday and enjoyed a program of superlative merit made up of vaudeville and photoplays. The same bill will be repeated today and tomorrow. The bill is topped by "Dances Originalities," featuring Ethel Gilmore. The act is an exceedingly clever terpsichorean.

SCOLLAY SQUARE OLYMPIA—

One of the most gripping scenes ever enacted before the motion picture camera is the thrilling cattle stampede which furnished a smashing climax in "The Sky Pilot," adapted from Ralph Connor's story, was directed by King Vidor, the young director genius, whose "Turn in the Road" was heralded as one of the best pictures of the past year. It is released by Associated First National Exhibitors, Inc., as a Catherine Curtis production.

BIG FILM AT NORUMBEGA

When a photoplay production is made by Albert Capellani for Cosmopolitan it is a certainty that the finest players will interpret various roles and that its stage investiture will be all that the most discriminating artistic taste could demand.

FINE PERFORMANCE.

Thus it is that for "The Wild Goose," a Paramount picture, which will be shown at Norumbega Park the last three days of this week, one of the best casts ever assembled in a Cosmopolitan production was engaged by Director Capellani. The result was an all-round performance of the finest quality.

The principal roles are in the hands of Mary MacLaren and Holmes E. Herbert. Although new to Paramount audiences, Miss MacLaren is an actress of ability who is rapidly forging to the front. She is a sister of Katherine MacDonald, who scored heavily in "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," and for a time she appeared with great success in the Passing Show of 1918 in New York.

ABILITY TESTED.

Holmes E. Herbert is an actor of fine ability who was in the legitimate stage years before he engaged in motion picture work. He has been seen in many Paramount pictures, and in "The Wild Goose" he has the husband of Diana Manners, the role of the romantic wife portrayed by Miss MacLaren, which tests the ability of both are fully tested in these roles.

We Should Join Brazil in Her Independence Celebration

The Poles in Poland planned to celebrate our Fourth of July as an acknowledgment not only of the assistance which we gave them in establishing their independence, but of the moral assistance which the example of our struggle for independence gave them all through the years of Poland's oppression, to hope for better things.

We should be surprised if we knew the extent of the knowledge of our history that even the Polish workmen have. George Washington is regarded among them almost as a national hero. Always through the dark years of Russian, German and Austrian oppression, these Poles hoped to imitate the example of America under Washington's leadership when we threw off the British oppression.

Brazil is about to celebrate the anniversary of her independence. We ought to join in it, as we ought to join in the celebration of the independence of any country. But there are especial reasons for participating in Brazil's celebration. Brazil is an American Commonwealth. We sympathized with her struggle for independence a hundred years ago. Our Monroe Doctrine assured her the maintenance of her freedom from European oppression when she gained it. We have close and increasing trade relations with her. Already we buy about $300,000,000 worth of her products every year, and she buys more than $100,000,000 of ours.

If our merchants and our commercial interests are intelligent and active and honest, we can soon induce her to buy of us as much as we buy of her. If our merchants and commercial classes are honest, that is the question. Less cleverness and more honesty is what we need to build up our South American trade. Let us get it into our heads once for all that the people of South America are intelligent human beings, who know when goods are not up to sample, who know when they have been cheated or when there has been an attempt to cheat them. Let us build up a reputation for honesty in South America, and an understanding that we cannot make South Americans conform to our tastes, but must conform to the tastes of South America if we would sell them goods, and we can soon have the trade of South America.

Congress Will Watch Those Debts

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

On the face of the record, if all war debts were cancelled the United States would lose nine thousand seven hundred and twenty-eight million dollars, not counting accrued interest; Britain would lose five thousand one hundred and twenty million dollars; France would gain nearly three thousand million dollars and Italy would gain four thousand millions.

You would naturally think, therefore, that the British would be as much opposed to cancellation as we are.

But most of what other nations owe us will probably be collectible in time, whereas of the loans Britain has made more than half, possibly two-thirds, looks like a total loss.

Russia, for example—not Soviet Russia, but Russia of the Czars, and of Kerensky—owes Britain almost three thousand million dollars. Can you imagine the Russia of tomorrow paying that?

So a general debt cancellation would really leave only one victim—Uncle Sam.

Now, he is notoriously "easy" at times. But to cross off those debts, now that the debtors have gorged themselves on the war spoils which our money and our fighting men made possible for them, is inconceivable even of so eccentric an individual as Uncle Sam frequently is.

The talk now is of "refunding" them. Secretary Mellon asks the Congress for blanket authority "to reconvert or extend loans or interest payments, to accept foreign securities in payment and to settle all claims not now secured."

Of course, power to act must rest somewhere. But the Congress, which holds the purse, may want to be among those present when the contents are affected.

Stripping Off the Disguise

No consumer today knows what tax he pays because of the excess profits tax, for it is concealed.

An investigation made by the Department of Justice in connection with the Lever act estimated it at 23 per cent.

Upon this estimate we base the assertion that the present sales tax (which is what the excess profits tax is, badly disguised) costs you folks twenty-three cents on each dollar you spend for most of the necessities of life.

That is entirely too heavy a tax to place upon the poor.

It is one of the reasons why goods are not moving as they should.

Substitute for it an honest sales tax of 1 per cent. on each and every purchase and you reduce the burden but increase the revenue, for under such a tax goods will move and business revive.

Such a tax, too, is easily reckoned and cheaply and easily collected.

The sales tax we advocate would be a very plain tax on every purchase, as well upon the securities and luxuries bought by the rich as upon the humble necessities of the poor.

It would be so plain that none could mistake it and none could dodge it.

Mrs. Evans' Gift

The papers announce that Mrs. Glendower Evans has given $3,000 to meet the deficit in the defence fund for Sacco and Vanzetti, now on trial for their lives on the charge of highway robbery and murder.

There is a great interest in this trial not present in the ordinary murder cases. The intellectual liberals of the country are watching the trial with anxiety, for they have feared that it was the aftermath of the un-American and atrocious oppressions by our Department of Justice under Palmer in its heresy hunts, incidental to Palmer's candidacy for President. So far, however, as a layman can judge by the newspapers, the court has sensed the importance of the case and is administering justice in the good, old-fashioned American way when all men were equal before the law. But even with justice, as Judge Thayer is administering it, the defence in such a case is necessarily expensive.

Mrs. Evans' gift calls to mind the omnipresence of this good lady wherever men seem to be oppressed. We have not observed that her aid goes to the conventional charities. It goes rather where the giver not only loses the money but loses social friends by the gift.

Mrs. Evans' services to the country are those of a kind which are not often rewarded in life. Such good Samaritans as she find their appreciation among men after death.

Presidents and Peanuts

It is a fine thing to begin life with a high determination to be President of the United States; but if you reach mature years and find the chances a million to one against your being President of the United States, it is a good plan to forget the high ambitions and do your best to make your peanut stand a success.

Happy and fortunate are the men who find out where they belong and strive to make themselves useful in their proper station. The Locomotive Engine

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

INTO the gloom of the deep, dark night,
With panting breath and a startled scream,
Swift as a bird in sudden flight,
Darts this creature of steel and steam.

Awful dangers are lurking nigh,
Rocks and chasms are near the track;
But straight by the light of its great white eye
It speeds through the shadows dense and black.

Terrible thoughts and fierce desires
Trouble its mad heart many an hour,
Where burn and smoulder the hidden fires,
Coupled ever with might and power.

It hates, as the wild horse hates the rein,
The narrow track of vale and hill;
And shrieks with a cry of startled pain,
And longs to follow its own wild will.

Oh, what am I but an engine shod
With muscle and flesh by the hand of God,
Speeding on through the dense, dark night,
Guided alone by the soul's white light?

Often and often my mad heart tires,
And hates its way with a bitter hate,
And longs to follow its own desires
And leave the end in the hands of fate.

Oh! ponderous engine of steel and steam,
Oh! human engine of flesh and bone,
Follow the white light's certain beam—
There lies safety, and there alone.

The narrow track of fearless truth,
Lit by the soul's great eye of light,
O passionate heart of restless youth,
Alone will carry you through the night.

Stars and Stripes

From drug store to drug store is now the shortest distance between two pints.

The greatest pessimist in the world is the man who wears a belt and suspenders at the same time.

Speaking of famous springs, we met a tramp the other day who had bathed in the Spring of '96.

At that, a lot of people get into the Gallery of Immortals on passes.

It is still a sign of great danger when you see a man reaching for his hip.

One of the penalties of greatness is that the more we grow the more congressmen we have to have.

We never get rid of a temper by losing it.

Men and books may best be judged by the mood in which we leave them.

Nature's laws are inexorable, yet she obeys them without exception; that is why she endures.

New Way to Study Germs

LONDON, July 5.—Britain's scientific world has been thrilled by the discovery by J. E. Barnard of how to apply the ultra-violet and other rays to the microscopic examination of living germs in such a way as to enable them to be examined in detail on a hitherto unknown scale.

In the course of his researches Mr. Barnard, who is hailed as the world's greatest optical physicist, has been able to photograph the living bacillus and reveal its finer structure. This is the greatest step in microscopy in thirty years. Where formerly microscopy gave a useful magnification of 1,000 diameters (or magnified an object a million times), beyond that point it started to break up light itself. It gave a bigger image but no more detail.

With violet rays, ultra-violet rays and "soft X-rays," Mr. Barnard has succeeded in getting a useful magnification of 3,100 diameters, which is equal to magnifying an object twelve and one-half million times. He shows the bacillus not as a dyed and shrivelled corpse, but as a living object twelve times larger than the best of the old microscopes, and reveals its structure. He can obtain a photograph in ninety seconds.

This will play an important part in identifying and isolating germs. Take trench fever, for example. We know everything about its causation and transmission, but we have not yet isolated the actual virus, and that is all-important. By higher magnification we may hope to do that.

His "Diplomacy"

"I say, dad," piped the small boy, "can I ask you a question?"

"Yes! go ahead!" replied the indulgent dad.

"What's diplomacy, dad? I saw it in a book the other day."

"Diplomacy, my boy," said dad, with a patronizing smile, "means doing or saying precisely the right thing at the right moment."

"Ah! Then I was a diplomatist last night, dad."

"Really, my boy? How d'you make that out?"

"Why, when mum came in with the castor oil I rolled Bobbie into my place in bed and then rolled him back before she came round to the other side!"

VACATION TIME

It is now vacation time, and in many homes disputes have arisen as to where and how the vacation shall be spent.

If the husband and wife have widely divergent tastes and ideas as to what should be done during recreation time and neither could be happy if the other were followed, it were better to decide upon different places and methods, than to be all wrought up and come home in an unpleasant frame of mind.

It is unfortunate that persons so intimately associated as husband and wife should have such different ideas in the matter of enjoyment and relaxation.

But many thousands will own to this state of affairs.

If this be true, make the best of it and be sensible and give gladly each the privilege which is so ardently desired by each, to go where it is desired and not have to go where it is distasteful.

Vacation time is a period of greater freedom for rest and with some it is an opportunity for more excitement than can be gotten in the quiet little home town.

MARRYING BENEATH HER OWN STATION

By Beatrice Fairfax.

"COULD a girl be happy married just a little beneath her station in life to a man who could give no promise of climbing up? Would it matter that her friends are all advancing? Is a girl a snob for considering the case in this light? Should the fine love of a man compensate for the lack of all material success?

"In other words, please help me decide whether to cut things off definitely and determine to forget or to allow things to drift until I care too much to withdraw. I can't decide alone whether or not to take a chance at life's happiness with a man who is to all appearances in a position financially and socially beneath my own."

This is the end of a long letter written me in all sincerity and all uncertainty by a girl who has analyzed her situation over and over again and who finds herself utterly at sea about it all.

A Coward

Perhaps she isn't a snob. But I think she is a coward. The man is clean-cut, well mannered and completely congenial, she tells me. His present position is good, but offers no chance for advancement. She visualizes him as remaining perpetually just where he is. And so he may if he marries a woman who has no strength to help him or no faith to inspire him.

I have never seen religious differences as a barrier to love so complete as environmental differences and a gap in training, tradition and custom. Racial customs and beliefs do keep folks on planes of thought and feeling so different that it is hard for them to meet and find a congenial basis for the business of every-day living.

But a slight difference in social grades is a farcical thing to stand between folks in this democracy of ours, where a rail-splitter may become President and the nation's great hero if he has in him the stuff of which giants are made.

The man who is used to eating off the kitchen table may have a little trouble adjusting himself to a butler and silver service. But if he's a clever there's nothing to prevent his learning.

The man who seems to be in a rut would probably get out of it if a fine, strong, sturdy woman were to make an effort to inspire and aid and stimulate him. Marriage is just as much "up to" the woman as to the man.

Cushioned Ease

It isn't a matter of cushioned ease for her and of struggle for him. It's a question of partnership and mutual adjustment and stimulation. The partners in a marriage pool their interests. The wife doesn't merely sit back and permit herself to be supported according to the test of her husband's abilities. She strives to aid him in growth and power.

The girl who feels that she's "marrying beneath her" probably is and will always have a feeling of sacrifice and of superiority likely to interfere with her being a partner-wife in the best meaning of wifehood.

And the man in whom a woman hasn't complete faith may deserve her doubts. The thing to do is to discover the true calibre of both young folks. Then "social strata" won't count.

TO which do you belong when it comes to opera—the new school or the old?

Are you a radical or a conservative? Be careful—the slightest word will betray you to your eager, argumentative enemies.

Set up your flag and rally around it as hard as you can—or you won't be included in the conversation at the table for the next month, anyhow.

You're either sentimental, florid, emotional and old-fashioned or you're vague, analytical, cynical, morose—and modern.

No medium ground for you. No general love of sweet music just because it's sweet and soothing and altogether delightful to the ear—perish the thought!

You mustn't take anything at its nice, comfortable face value—not if you would keep up with the newest angle and the very latest idea. You must delve and pick to pieces and analyze and be psychological.

Poor thing, when all you want to do is to lean back and be carried away on a wave of rich, deep melody, or lifted and swung in a rapture of lilting music, and be as irresponsible as a mouse over town and country, field and forest, lake and mountain alike.

Wise by Fits and Starts

It's rather tiresome, isn't it—all this fad for argument and the parching fear of sentiment and emotion?

As if anything of any consequence ever happened anywhere without either sentiment or emotion at the bottom of it.

Now! How can anything that is really great ever be really old, either in music or in art or in literature or in what is vastly more interesting than any of these things—in life itself, or in death, either, for that matter?

Strange how the fashions last when it comes to little, unimportant things like birth and death and the hope of immortality and the aching need of some kind of faith in something or somebody to keep the human heart from breaking.

Come to think of it, there's nothing particularly new about a baby, is there? And yet, there's nothing old about it, either.

Trundle in your cradle, little Tootsie-cums, the moderns have overlooked you! It won't be long till they begin to call you "old fashioned" and entirely too sentimental—in which case you may as well throw away your rattle and leave your rubber doll with the teething ring around its neck to its fate. Yours is sealed—in the eyes of the disputants, at any rate.

How wise we are—by fits and starts—we, of this strange and perturbing year of grace. And how little we seem to know about anything that really matters, after all.

The Eternal Verities

But, fortunately, the things that really matter don't seem to pay the faintest attention to any of us. They go right on, quite as if we hadn't forgotten all about them.

The moon rises in splendor and sinks in wistful beauty. The sun cheers us even against our will. The Summer nods buffet us and beckon us by turn, and even the grass at our feet springs green and hopeful without bothering to ask single dismal prophecy as to what's going to happen to it in a month or so at the latest.

Whoever coined the phrases concerning the "eternal verities" spoke truth and spoke it naively.

I wonder if the fads have been having an opera season. I saw a lot of them in a great crowd the other day—all hurrying across the walk two by two, as if the fate of the world depended upon them and their resolute intelligence.

How little and how self-important we humans must look to any Great Intelligence that sees us from above and smiles tolerantly, perhaps, at our strange little ideas of what is new and what is old and what is vital and what is not of the least real importance to anyone or anything on the face of the earth.

To the Editor

Protect the Parents

Editor Boston American:

I think your editorial on vacations for parents is excellent. There are societies for prevention of cruelty to animals, children, etc., but why not a society for prevention of cruelty to aged parents (no doubt some will say, "how foolish!"), but it is needed much more, maybe, in some instances, than the other societies. Many dear old mothers and fathers in our city today are begrudged the crust of bread from the tables of sons and daughters to whom they gave their all. W. K. BURNES.
